Most of us go through life on autopilot, tuned to the wrong channel. We need to scan for new frequencies—above all for our own personal hero channel. This is a magic channel that takes us to new and extraordinary worlds, landscapes of endless possibilities and new beginnings. From there, we can bring back to this world incredible stories, knowledge, elixirs and treasures. We can educate, inform and heal. We can become the shamans, the gurus, the bold adventurers, the fearless explorers who cross the edge of the world into the Unknown Country. Only we are brave enough.

Psychologically, the hero's task is to allow his ego to perish so that his Self may be born. Whereas the ego is limited, narrow in its outlook, afraid of change, the Self is expansive, fully part of the cosmos, brimming with energy. It represents a whole new way of being, higher, more connected, more adventurous. The confines of the old ego are obliterated. The Self can soar to new, unimagined heights. It can see the farthest horizons. It can enjoy new, glorious vistas and panoramas. When you are your Self, you walk with the gods. You have moved your centre from the mortal world to the immortal. Everyone has access to the hero program, but few choose to activate it. Only those who do can become psychically whole. Only they can establish their true identity as complete people who have fully integrated all of the different strands of their life. They are the people who can defeat their inner demons, transcend their apparent limitations, aim for the highest stars that surround the throne of God. It's time to become a hero. Beyond that there is only one more stage... To become God!

Psychologist Carl Jung contrasted the Ego with the Self. The Ego is the centre of consciousness and gives the individual his sense of identity and purpose. The Ego is what we imagine ourselves to be, yet we are entirely mistaken. The Self is the centre of our psyche, our real centre. It's where our true identity resides. Jung said, "The Self is not only the centre but also the circumference which embraces both conscious and unconscious; it is the centre of this totality, just as the ego is the centre of the conscious mind." (Likewise, the ancient Greek philosopher Empedocles, a Grand Master of the Illuminati, said, "God is a circle whose centre is everywhere, and its circumference nowhere.") The Self is nothing less than the soul, the divine spark, the higher self, the imago Dei itself: the Image of God. We must go on an arduous quest into our unconscious to find who we really are. No task is more difficult. Only heroes can succeed.

Secret societies such as the Illuminati have dedicated themselves to probing the unconscious, to illuminating the darkness in which so much transcendent knowledge resides. To put it simply, the unconscious is the realm of the divine while consciousness is the arena of our petty, trivial, daily lives.

Archetypes that typically appear in the Hero's story are: the Herald (the character or situation that issues a challenge to the hero), the Mentor (the hero's wise guide), Allies (the hero's helpers), Enemies (the hero's opponents), the Shapeshifter (this person does not keep the same "shape" i.e. shapeshifters have an unstable identity and are often liars, con-men, hypocrites, informants or traitors; they introduce doubt into story), the Shadow (the hero's ultimate enemy—usually himself if he did but know it; the version of himself attracted to the wrong path), the Trickster (a character who plays jokes on the hero and cuts his ego down to size), Threshold Guardians (those who control entrances, exits and staging posts through which the hero must pass on his journey; can be good, but are often bad), Anima/Animus (the hero/heroine's love interest), Persona (the hero's mask to the world that he wants to shed), Ego (the hero's false self that gets in the way of his quest for his Higher Self), Aurum (the hero's fantasy self based on narcissism), the False Claimant (a character who questions the hero's credentials, or claims he was the real hero and the hero is in fact an impostor), and finally, and most importantly, the Self (the hero's apotheosis).

Elite, the Old World Order—the dynastic families that rule the world—care only about themselves. They have no interest at all in helping “the masses” to rise to a higher plane. In fact, they actively oppose such a transition since if the masses were of higher calibre, their power over them would be threatened.

It's time to depart on the long, hard road to find our Higher Selves. It's time to separate ourselves from the ordinary world that has ensnared us with its trivial concerns and easy, disposable pleasures that reach their sell-by date almost as soon as they are touched. It's time to cross the threshold that separates the world of Common Day from the extraordinary world. The hero's path is right there in front of us, all marked out for us, yet it's a path that few will be taking. You want an extraordinary life? Then what are you going to do that is extraordinary? You want to be a hero? Then do something heroic. Take that first step into the Unknown Country and begin the process of transforming yourself from base metal into gold. The hero monomyth is the supreme act of alchemy that takes the prima materia (the primary material)—ourselves—and purifies and perfects it until it shines, glints and gleams like the gold of God.

We must move from the culture of the Ego (the arena of anti-heroes striving to be egotistic gods worshipped by the masses; the Satanic path of self-love, selfishness, narcissism and dominance over others; the over-rational mind that is mired in scientific materialism and rejects the spiritual aspect of life; the delusion that “consciousness” defines us) to the culture of the Self (the arena of true heroes, striving to raise everyone up to divinity, to form a community of gods; the path of the True God, of love of all, selflessness, self-mastery rather than mastery of others, of deep humility). The greatest irony is that the masses slavishly worship and glorify “God” when, in fact, the True God perfect humility and would never welcome being worshipped. Nothing is less god-like than the desire to be worshipped. To crave worship is to be a creature of an out-of-control ego. It is Satan who demands worship, and his followers (all of those so keen to bow and prostrate themselves) are Satan worshippers, nothing more and nothing less. The ceremonies of the Christians, Muslims and Jews where they debase themselves in their desperation to glorify Satan are grotesque and nauseating. You should reject any religion that demands that you bow, prostrate yourself, pray constantly, restrict what you do on certain days, read a “holy” text over and over again to the exclusion of all other texts, wear certain clothes, avoid certain foods etc. These are nothing but ways of

We all have a lesson to learn. It's associated with our personal "secret", and we assuredly all have one. The Hero Program allows us to confront it, deal with it and move on to a higher level. Jung recognised that the task of an analyst was to discover a patient's secret because it was this secret that was preventing the patient from living properly. In this regard, the analyst is equivalent to the archetypal mentor. He helps the hero face the greatest challenges. He prepares him for the ordeal. But ultimately, it is the patient and not the analyst who must do battle. The hero must find his shadow and deal with his secret wound, like the spiritual wound of the Fisher King.

The Illuminati provide ten degrees of ascending difficulty for reaching the soul. Many members of the Illuminati never reach the last three mystery degrees, so being a member guarantees nothing. Why should reaching the soul be easy? Why would anyone think that? It's the culmination of a whole life's worth of dedication to the task. And not just one lifetime...many.

What a contrast with Bono and Geldof. The Ego says: What's in it for me? It's all about me. Because I'm worth it. I'm all right, Jack. Who cares about anyone else? The Self says: How may I serve? It's about us. Because we're worth it. Is everyone all right? Who needs help? The hero, like the great ancient gods, suffers, dies and is resurrected. He must meet death before he can be reborn and transformed. He must sacrifice something like an old habit or belief; something that is blocking his progress. His task is to go from the humdrum, ordinary, boring world to the special, exciting, extraordinary world and bring back secret knowledge and special powers that raise him and his community to a higher level. He comes back renewed, stronger, better, and promoted to divinity.

We have a divided psyche—consciousness versus the unconscious, the Ego versus the Self—and that is the cause of our problems. When we heal our psyche by bringing the Ego under the control of the Self, by illuminating the unconscious contents of our mind that had previously haunted us, we reach a higher state of being. We are unique in the animal kingdom for having this Ego/Self split in our psyche. It's our task to try to reconnect the two.

All conflict is psychological. The wars, the cruelty, the inhumanity that have afflicted the human race throughout its turbulent history are products of a few simple psychological laws. Tragically for the world, the governments of nations comprise self-serving politicians rather than high calibre psychologists. We live in the Shadow World, where the hidden contents of the human mind pour out in an endless torrent of callousness, violence, selfishness, greed, degradation and narcissism. That flow could be stemmed easily, simply by teaching people where it all comes from. But there are those in high places who have no desire to change anything. They love the sewers that humanity wades through. They want to watch us being debased and brutalised. We are the damned, the inmates of a planetary mental asylum. Humanity is the creature of the diseased unconscious. The toxins spill out everywhere, turning the atmosphere into pure poison. We can scarcely breathe because there's so much pollution. We are the undead, a vampire species sucking each other's blood and never seeing any true human face reflected in the mirror. Yet we could easily escape from this twilight world and step into the sunlight. We need to demand that the political class that has failed us so dismally is swept aside. In their place, we would place meritocratic psychologists whose remit is not to manipulate how much money we have but to optimise the contents of our minds. "Psycho government" is government of people's minds, by people's minds for people's minds. If we cure the problems of the human mind, everything else—the arena of conventional politics—falls into place. Think of the trillions of dollars that would be saved if jails, police, armies, navies, airforces, nuclear armaments, conventional armaments, secret services, intelligence services, criminal lawyers, law courts were all rendered obsolete. With that money, the world could be altered beyond recognition. What are we waiting for?

Jung considered that the perfection attributed to Christ was a problem because such perfection was psychologically bound to summon its opposite: the Antichrist. It was a psychological law, he maintained, and it explains why there is such an expectation amongst Christian Fundamentalists of the coming of the Antichrist. It's their own shadow

The lynch mob, the baying crowd, the rabid “moral majority”, projects its collective shadow onto its victims. David Icke and his kind orchestrate the collective shadow of crazed anarcho-capitalist libertarians. The “Truth” movement’s hysteria grows in direct proportion to the extent to which its arguments are refuted. Has any member of the Truth movement ever backed down on a single point? These same people project their collective shadow onto the Illuminati and the New World Order. Their warped image of the Illuminati exists only in their own minds. If you believe in the devil, you’ll be determined to find him “out there” so that you can say, “Told you so.” You’ll always find him all right—in your own shadow, which you’ll always project onto others, whom you will then persecute for being Satanic.

As for the Jews, they themselves have now developed a grotesque shadow that they project onto the Palestinians. In response, Islam’s collective shadow is projected onto Israel and its ally America, which then also drags in America’s European allies. The West then projects its collective shadow onto Islam, and so we go round and round, with Satan and his archons orchestrating the great shadow show. Of course, there are real enemies as well as projected shadows. Satan, his archons and the OWO are all too real. Yet understanding our shadow in all of its manifestations can enable us to defeat them. If we diminish the shadow, we increase the light. Satan is the shadow director, the orchestrator of the poisons present in the unconscious. He thrives on imbalance, on unconscious desires and unspoken fears. To defeat him, society has to attain harmony, proper balance between men and women, young and old, different races, different religions, different nations, different economic systems, different political systems.

... members of the anti-New World Order movement project their fear of others, and their resentment of being governed by anyone other than themselves, onto the New World Order. These people have difficulty operating in large, complex societies because their id and superego are essentially anti-social in character. They are suffering from acute paranoia. A healthy society is one where the ego dominates, and the id and superego are each given healthy, but not excessive, expression. That is the world advocated by the New World Order. That is the essence of the new society the Illuminati seek to build. Capitalism—the id philosophy—must be consigned to history, as must the superego ideologies of the fanatic—Islam, Christianity, Judaism, Hinduism, Communism, Fascism etc. Who in their right mind would oppose this New World Order? Unfortunately, the vast majority of people are not in their right mind.

Our lives are ruled by oppressive governments obsessed with a Panopticon mentality. The “War on Terror”, largely a fiction, has allowed a massive extension in the government’s powers to spy on us and interfere in our lives. There can be no doubt that 9/11 was an ideal event from the point of view of Panopticon governments; their pretext to extend their dominion into every area. All of their new tyrannical laws must be rolled back. We are under far more danger from malign government pretending to be benign than we are from “terrorists”. A few thousand people have been killed by terrorists; billions are affected by government intrusion into their lives. The true function of the State is to maximise the merits of its citizens, not to spy on them. Citizens flourish when they are free from surveillance and encroachment in their lives. Government must be strong in setting up the framework of society, and weak when it comes to interference in people’s daily lives.

The truth is that the War on Terror is a simulation of a war. “Terror” is an abstraction, not a real, identifiable enemy. It’s a matter of opinion whether someone is a terrorist or a freedom fighter. The purpose of this strange, obscure, undefined war is to keep the military-industrial complex and intelligence agencies in a position of permanent power, to justify governments taking draconian measures against their people in the name of “Homeland Security”. Everyone is spied on by the authorities. In Orwell’s prophetic novel Nineteen Eighty-Four, war was permanent, the perfect means to control the population. If there are no real wars then the Old World Order simply simulate them, just as Big Brother did in Nineteen Eighty-Four. No one can tell the difference anymore.

Their position amounts to a kind of mind blindness brought on by a flawed and arrogant rationality that, ironically, is shown to be fundamentally irrational when its axioms are logically examined. The Illuminati are well qualified to say so because many of their members come from just this background of atheistic, scientific hyper-rationality. It was only when they engaged in "deep thought" that they realised the entire paradigm of contemporary science was built on sand. Although science provides brilliant answers in specific areas—those areas that have no connection with mind and free will—its understanding of the true workings of the cosmos is astoundingly close to zero.

magically spring out of nothing, along with an entire universe, as scientists so ridiculously assert. And scientists have the arrogance to call religion stupid!!! When we say “Mind”, we are referring to an unconscious cosmic mind. What that unconsciousness is striving to do is become conscious—which is the ultimate manifestation and actualisation of mind’s potential. God’s mind is the one that has made all that is unconscious conscious. We, the human race, are a long way behind God. We have a spark of consciousness amongst an ocean of the unconscious. The Holy Grail IS an object, but in order to understand what it is you must first accomplish a spiritual, not a physical journey. Only the spiritual can attain the Grail. To find the Grail, you have to use lateral thinking. You have to understand that it’s necessary to find something else first, and that until you have achieved this other quest, you can never achieve the Grail Quest. You have to take a step BACK before you can go forward. So many knights failed to understand that simple requirement.

In terms of the Grail, someone who has started to have regular flashes of enlightenment is on the verge of Grail consciousness. The Holy Grail is the most sacred object of the Illuminati and only those who have attained the highest mystery degree know the Grail’s location. The Grail is in fact a “gnosis accelerator”. The Grail transforms episodic enlightenment into full and final gnosis. It’s the holiest and most sacred object of all—the supreme culmination of spirituality—because it is none other than the Heavengate: the God Portal. To use the Grail is to become God. Thus there is no object more precious, more remarkable, more magical, more mystical, and more divine than the Holy Grail. Centuries ago, the leaders of the Illuminati went to astounding lengths to safeguard it and ensure it never fell into the wrong hands. In the event that all of the leaders were killed, they left a fabulously intricate puzzle that could be solved to ascertain its whereabouts. But they deliberately included many highways and byways that would mislead those who did not have the noblest and most spiritual of intentions. In essence, only those who have already attained the foothills of gnosis can solve the puzzle. Such people are able to make remarkable intuitive leaps that link together parts of the puzzle in a way that would never occur to those lacking the necessary intuitive qualities.

What is Illuminism? The first seven degrees provide the theoretical framework in which to explain all of science, mathematics, religion, philosophy, politics, society, and psychology in one Grand Unified Theory of Everything. It's to that end that this series of books is dedicated. The remaining three “mystery” degrees of the Illuminati are the practical application of the theory—how to achieve super-consciousness, to harness the power of the gods and, above all, to complete the long journey to ultimate gnosis via the Holy Grail itself. The Illuminati cell that is responsible for this series of books consists of three seventh degree Illuminists—but we are not yet party to the mystery degrees, so, even if we wanted, we couldn't reveal to you the secrets of the mystery degrees. It is of course those secrets that we wish to possess and which drive us forward. With this series of books, you will have at your disposal (with a few exceptions in some specific areas that require enhanced secrecy), the same theoretical framework as any sixth degree Illuminatus, and a great deal of what is the province of seventh degree Illuminists.

Consider a model of consciousness where the unconscious mind takes the role of the loading program and supplies subroutines to consciousness, which the conscious mind then runs to accomplish a number of key tasks. To understand this model, it's necessary to consider six ideas: Plato's domain of perfect Forms, Aristotle's concepts of entelechy and teleology, Julian Jaynes' concept of the bicameral mind, Carl Jung's concept of the collective unconscious, Rupert Sheldrake's concept of morphic resonance and the "cosmic equation" of the Illuminati: $r \geq 0$.

In other words, any activity you wish to undertake, no matter what (unless you are a groundbreaking genius), already exists as a dialectical Platonic Form available to your unconscious mind. You just need to tune into it like a radio station, pick up the signal and start channelling it. If you let your unconscious mind deal with it rather than your conscious mind (which always gets in the way), you will be able to master virtually any skill. Of course, getting your conscious mind "out of the way" is extraordinarily difficult.

Most great accomplishments are achieved through the unconscious, intuitive mind. As Aldous Huxley pointed out, consciousness is a "reducing valve" that filters out the enormous amounts of information potentially available to us. Consciousness gives us just enough scope to hold down a dull job and conform to a tedious, brain-dead society.

When a Universal Form interacts with a human mind it does so not as an abstraction but as a being in the unconscious—a hidden voice, a secret guide. Using the example of Trinity's helicopter program, it would be as if

But the right brain gods have not vanished. For one thing, they communicate with us in dreams. In emergencies, they can seize control and save our lives. When we are expert at something, we are essentially giving expression to the god within. The gods can confer their superpowers on us if we know how to listen correctly. We can load “god programs” that will allow us to accomplish anything we put our mind to. These are the treasures that await our complete mastery of the mind.

Jung’s ideas are radical. He says, in effect, that far from being left to our own devices in a frightening and alien world, we are provided with a complete program of archetypes that will help us to actualise our full potential. Every aspect of our life is already anticipated by the archetypes: the mother-child relationship, the father-child relationship, the only child situation, the brother-brother relationship, brother-sister, sister-sister, child-friend, child-stranger, child-teacher etc—all of these are governed by an appropriate archetype. Adolescence, falling in love, marriage, parenthood, middle age, seeking the Higher Self, old age, preparing for death, preparing for the afterlife: each of these is archetypally conditioned. If we just let the archetypes take their course, as humans did in the days of the bicameral mind, everything would proceed smoothly. The truth is that we are all entelechies. Everything we need to become God is programmed into us. Just as an acorn is programmed to become an oak tree, we are programmed to reach maximum actualisation as divinities. The only thing that can go wrong is if our inbuilt program is subverted, and then things can rapidly start heading off course, leaving us bewildered, frightened, anxious, and alienated from our true selves. Welcome to Planet Earth!

When men and women try to imagine how the other sex think and feel, they often get it completely wrong because they are projecting how they would act onto someone else who is wired differently. If they could be sympathetic rather than empathetic, things would suddenly make perfect sense. In truth, we can only run accurate empathic simulations of others if they closely resemble us. For example, an intuitive introvert thinker will have an excellent idea of how another intuitive introvert thinker will think and act, but be clueless in terms of how a sensing extravert feeler will think and act. The accuracy of the simulation would disintegrate in the second case.

The anima is a man's feminine side, his inner female. It's via his anima that he understands the female sex. For a woman, the animus is her masculine aspect, her inner male. If something goes wrong with the archetypal development of the anima/animus, an individual may identify with their soul-image and thus acquire characteristics of the opposite sex. Jung regarded this as the basis of homosexuality and transvestism. If a man identifies with his anima, he becomes effeminate and his soul-image changes into that of the masculine persona he should have had i.e. his persona and his anima flip over and he falls in love with men.

The lesson is that all the greatest treasures that the unconscious offers us come with warnings. They can seriously damage your health. All of these higher abilities to which we have potential access must be handled with extreme care and be integrated with our consciousness cautiously, skilfully and with supreme control. Just as nuclear reactors have control rods to prevent the chain reaction turning into an explosion, so we must use psychic control rods to dampen the energy of such numinous and overpowering entities as the mana personalities. One way or another, you must master the mana personalities. Before you can make the final approach to the ultimate prize—the imago Dei—you must be armed with all of the mana powers.

Jung said of the Self, "...it is not only the centre but also the whole circumference which embraces both conscious and unconscious; it is the centre of this totality, just as the ego is the centre of the conscious mind." The circumpunct, the Monad, is a perfect representation of the Self. The Self is a new and glorious centre of personality towards which we can grow and strive. In cosmic terms, we would label Lucifer as the moral persona, Satan as the evil shadow, Sophia as the wise and radiant anima, the Logos as the animus, and Abraxas as the Whole Self, the cosmic entelechy. This is reminiscent of Carlos Castaneda's mentor don Juan's teaching about arriving at the Totality of the Self, achieved through integrating the Tonal (the known and the knowable, the conscious mind) and the Nagual (the unknown, the unconscious mind). Don Juan taught that the Island of the Tonal had to be swept clean of irrelevances and bad habits, in order to create the warrior's resolve, discipline and strength of character necessary to withstand the onslaught of the Nagual.

A whole human being is someone who has attained perfect left-right hemispheric integration, where the contents of the unconscious have been illuminated and fully brought into consciousness, where mind, spirit, soul, reason and logic are fully harmonized. The ego needs to assimilate the persona, the shadow, the soul-image, the mana personalities and, finally, the Self i.e. as well as having a healthy persona attuned to the ego, the ego needs to integrate all unconscious elements and render them conscious. If it fails to do so, it cannot achieve gnosis. As the ego expands, it starts to take on more of the character of the Self, hence is able to expand even more. When all the contents of the cosmic collective unconscious are brought into consciousness then that consciousness is none other than God. Why? Because it knows everything there is to know.

The archetypes constitute a sequenced program designed to lead us from maximum potential to maximum actualisation. The archetypes are teleological. It's their purpose to aid us. They can lead us all the way to God if we let the program execute correctly. If not, we go astray and we have to take a far steeper and more treacherous stairway to heaven. If we design a society that works hand in hand with the archetypes, we can build heaven on earth. Conversely, if we have a society that uses the destructive power of archetypes, we will do immense damage to ourselves. That's exactly where we're at now.

The process of individuation is about developing all the aspects of ourselves that we have neglected. It's about becoming a well-rounded, balanced person. It's about perfecting ourselves. If we are too introverted, we need to explore extraversion, and vice versa. If we think too much, we must get in touch with our feeling side. If we are too intuitive but pay little attention to the world around us, we need to spend time developing our physical, sensual awareness.

If we're too introverted, we should find ways to practise being extraverted. If too extraverted, we should try to explore our introverted side. Similarly, we must examine the four functions: thinking, feeling, intuition and sensation. How important is each to us? Do we go through life defiantly in one way, ignoring the others? Do we think and analyse too much, cutting ourselves off from feeling? Are we too quick to emotionally react rather than thinking something through? Are we so obsessed with letting our intuition show us future possibilities that we don't live in the present and fail to pay much attention to what's going on around us? Alternatively, do we spend so much time sucking in the detail of the present moment that we can never make plans?

The “clash of civilisations”, as the war between the West and Islam is sometimes called, is nothing of the sort. This struggle has nothing to do with principles, values or morality. Those are simply the pretexts that “holy warriors” use to rationalize what they are doing. The whole thing is actually about an imbalanced, unhealthy conscious life summoning an extremely dark unconscious response, which is then projected outwards, leading to murder and mayhem. All of the mainstream religions, especially the monotheistic ones, are breeding grounds of neurosis and psychosis because they continually wage war against natural human instincts such as having fun, having sex, fooling around, playing, taking drugs. Islam bans drugs, alcohol, recreational sex, public demonstrations of any affection, flirting. Women are deemed so sexually dangerous that they are compelled to wear burqas to hide them from the male gaze. Think of the sheer scale of the mental illness inherent in all of these prohibitions. Islam, because of its fanatical pursuit of purity, has unconsciously summoned Satan into its heart and is now nothing but Devil worship. The more it strives for purity the more Satanic it becomes. It’s casting an evil shadow all across the world. Islam, a religion that sees itself as all about peace, has in fact become all about the opposite—pure violence. It was psychologically inevitable that this would happen.

Instead, we should speak of the psychologically healthy and unhealthy, of positive and negative, of the life affirming and the life denying, of the vital and enervated, of health and sickness, of actualisation and obstruction. All problems are psychological, and they require psychological answers. Smart, effective psychology is the bedrock of a healthy society. We must replace priests, popes, pastors, reverends, imams, rabbis and monks with psychologists and philosophers. We must replace “holy” books with psychological texts, prayers with therapy.

The Archetypal story will always feature a hero, a great quest, a great treasure, a journey into darkness and despair, a terrible enemy, a beguiling soul-image. There will be traitors, shape-shifters, false friends, false enemies, magic, superpowers, ordeals, temporary setbacks, temporary victories, wise advisers, evil counsellors. The hero has to negotiate his way through all of this. To be successful, he has to transform himself into his Higher Self. The archetypal tale of the hero is really just the tale of individuation, of becoming all you can be by integrating all of the elements of your unconscious. The archetypal hero's tale is one in which all of the unconscious elements of the psyche are projected onto the external world, where the hero wrestles with them and masters them (thus integrating them). The end of the quest is when the hero has achieved psychic wholeness and replaced the ego with the Self. He is now on a different, higher plane, ready to return to the world and offer it the benefits of the great wisdom he has acquired.

The Periodic Table that forms the basis of chemistry is arranged according to “atomic number”—the number of protons in the nucleus of an atom of each chemical element. Each atom has the same number of electrons as protons. The number of neutrons is closely related to the number of protons. Protons and neutrons can both be decomposed into groups of three quarks. A proton is two “up” quarks and one “down” quark. A neutron, on the other hand, is two down quarks and one up quark. Isn’t that astounding? Everything, at core, is just a set of mathematical relations. Without numerical relations, the physical world of atoms, and the objects with magnitude to which they give rise, could not exist. Pythagoras has been proved essentially right, although it must be acknowledged that mathematics is not the full story.

In short, reality consists of an ordering principle that we can label Apollonian (and which is fundamentally mathematical), and a chaotic, irrational, passionate and emotional striving that we can label Dionysian in honour of the Greek god of wine and intoxication. The two principles are harnessed dialectically in a process of thesis, antithesis and synthesis, and their teleological objective is to maximise power in all of its forms, especially knowledge since knowledge is power. As energy flickers between dimensionlessness and dimensionality, between a domain outside space and time and a domain inside space and time, it learns mathematics. Why? Because it is mathematics that defines dimensions. Zero-dimensionality is not in space and time. The number zero is dimensionless. Zero is the origin of existence. Zero is Mind. Zero is God as he is in himself. But zero contains all numbers because zero is one divided by infinity. Whenever you see the number zero, you should not think of it as “nothing” but as the number one—the supreme Monad—divided by all numbers without limit (infinity). When you understand zero in those terms you see that the condition of absolute nothingness is impossible because “zero” is not nothing but something, namely a numerator of one and a denominator of infinity. Zero inverted is infinity i.e. one divided by zero equals infinity. Zero has an intrinsic tendency to invert itself because it is the only way it can make anything happen, and when it does it creates infinity. The Big Bang—the creation of an entire universe from nothing—was actually the inevitable inversion of zero leading to the generation of infinity. One dimensionless point equals a dimensionless universe, which in turn equals a cosmos of unconscious mind. To create dimensionality, at least two distinct points are required since two connected points make a one-dimensional line. Dimensionality is a consequence of plurality, of numbers greater than zero and one. Space and time are a consequence of plurality. As soon as “One” becomes “Many”, dimensionality emerges from dimensionlessness. The whole process is mathematical.

Illuminism, Hyperianism & Ontological Mathematics
The Hero-God Series—My Notes & Clippings

A human baby starts off as an “archetypal being” (meaning that is guided purely by archetypes), almost like a bio-robot. It starts to develop a proper consciousness at the point at which an Immortal Self makes contact with it i.e. consciousness is connected with the Immortal self, not with the baby as a biological organism. A disturbing but fascinating corollary is that if no such contact took place, then a human would be alive without having a soul. They would be guided by archetypes not by a genuine soul. It would be as if they had a simulated soul, a simulacrum of a soul rather than the real thing. It is this phenomenon that the Brotherhood of the Shadows have spent millennia studying in order to perfect their sinister science of the Golem.

However, something extraordinary has been observed: it’s almost impossible to hypnotise an Illuminatus in any simple way even when they wish to be hypnotised. The reason? Most of the Illuminati are dominant introverts and have high “cortical arousal”. It’s very hard to switch off the consciousness of such people. This novel, originally due in 2009 and then 2010, will not now appear until 2012. 21 December 2012 has been pencilled in as its suitably portentous release date. One must always have an eye to “fulfilling the prophecies”. After all, it took Jesus Christ a long way! In 2009, the novel was assigned to a “ghost writer”, but various issues arose and it has now been reassigned to one of the three Illuminists responsible for this series of books. It must therefore await the completion of this series. Moreover, it will be influenced by the political situation in the USA in the election year of 2012. The Soul Camera will be the culmination of the Illuminati’s current communication project to bring all interested parties to the same level of theoretical knowledge as any sixth Degree Illuminatus. No other secret society in history has ever made so much unique knowledge available, and all for free. Why did the Illuminati choose to carry out this unprecedented act? Because the Grand Master of the Illuminati, the person most attuned to the cosmic dialectic, concluded that the moment had come when the Illuminati could provide a stunning new phase in the dialectic that would at long last pave the way for a New World Order and a metaphorical quantum leap forward in humanity’s progress towards divinity. The present Grand Master is a man of unparalleled genius, by far the most meritorious member of the Illuminati, and certain to join the list of Immortals in due course.

A world of objects is sterile and meaningless. Scientific materialism can offer no account of how subjectivity entered the cosmos. How could it have come from objects? If subjects didn’t come from objects, then they must have pre-existed objects. Therefore, objects must have come from subjects. That’s exactly what Illuminism teaches. The Big Bang universe of physical objects came from a mental, subjective cosmos. Objects are alienated subjects. Objects are dimensional while subjects are dimensionless.

Illuminism, Hyperianism & Ontological Mathematics
The Hero-God Series—My Notes & Clippings

Subjects belong to the domain of zero, and objects to the non-zero domain. Scientific materialism can't explain the existence of subjectivity or subjects, but these form the core of Illuminism. Without subjectivity, the world can have no meaning or purpose. Without subjectivity, the world can't really be said to exist at all. Who would experience it? Who would know it was there? The world would just be a bizarre machine in a permanently dark room.

Physicist Paul Davies described a "life principle": "There is an underlying principle that constrains the universe to evolve towards life and mind." (This is the position of Illuminism—the dialectic applied to a teleological, unconscious cosmic mind will inevitably generate consciousness and finally cosmic consciousness aka "God Consciousness.") The Anthropic Principle in its various forms is completely consistent with the concept of the cosmos as an unconscious mind seeking to become conscious.

ILLUMINISM CAN REFUTE all other religions and philosophies. It can refute scientific materialism. None of them can refute Illuminism. Illuminism is the summit of human thought, the culmination of human genius and intuitive insight. It is Truth with a capital "T". There is nothing beyond it. Once a religion has accounted for zero and infinity, the origin and the ultimate, the nothing and the everything, there is nowhere else to go. Illuminism is quite simply the last word in religion. There is no question that Illuminism has not addressed.

Because of psychic balance, submissives have a dominant shadow, so when their Shadow possesses them, they respond with ferociously aggressive violence. These people are exceptionally dangerous when ruled by the Shadow. Nothing is more important than combating Shadow ideologies. They are responsible for most of the wars and conflict in the world. Humanity, at core, is still bicameral. Most people are controlled by the silent voice of their unconscious. Most people aren't rational and most of them are barely conscious. They lack a strong identity, which is why others are so easily able to impose an identity on them. They can't help projecting the contents of their unconscious and they have no idea that they are doing it.

Consciousness, the highest and most complex product of mind, requires an enormous and intricate psychic underpinning. Consciousness is the psychic element uniquely capable of reflecting on its own existence. It can achieve this only in the presence of other consciousnesses: a lone mind can never become conscious.

The unconscious cosmic mind breaks into many minds with the aim of becoming conscious through them. In other words, the unconscious One Mind becomes Many Minds, each of which becomes conscious, and which then recombine to become One Mind again. Thus, the One Mind starts off as an unconscious mind, but with an inbuilt desire and drive to become conscious. It does so by becoming Many. Finally, the Many become One again. Thus, the One has gone from unconsciousness to consciousness via being Many in the physical world of individuation. That is the cosmic cycle. The cosmic psyche is programmed to accomplish it.

The laws of science should be replaced by the laws of science AND psyche. Only then can we finally arrive at the Grand Unified Theory of Everything. The laws of science and psyche are the laws of the interactions of matter and mind archetypes. So, when people ask where the laws of physics are located, now they have their answer: they are located as archetypes in the domain of mind. In relation to the material universe, that domain is everywhere at once. Every particle in the material universe is linked to the relevant archetypes that dictate its behaviour. That's how particles "know" what to do. They have elementary archetypal minds that give them all of the information they require. None of this takes place at the level of consciousness. The vast majority of mental activity is unconscious. Consciousness is very much the tip of the iceberg, the highest expression of mind.

Of course, anyone who achieves this level of mental mastery has attained apocalyptic powers, but, fortunately, only the wisest and sanest ever reach this stage. Even Satan, who possesses enormous power, knows how important it is not to destabilise the "force" (as the cosmic balance may be called). The more power you gain, the more cautious you are in exercising that power, which is why Phosters, archons and the highest level of the Illuminati, do not go around making childish, gimmicky use of their power. Anyone who wished to use their powers in that way would never be permitted to acquire them. The controlling powers of the cosmos are committed to homeostasis i.e. to ensuring that the cosmos is self-regulating and balanced, that it maintains a constant, stable condition. Only from a stable platform can higher goals be attained.

At the ultimate level of existence, subject and object merge mentally and it is impossible to tell one from the other. The True God is both the physical cosmos and the conscious cosmic mind. He is the Hegelian Absolute. Viewed this way, we are all part of God, all expressions of God, all made of God—so is it any surprise that we are all capable of becoming God? In fact, it is not so much a case of becoming God—because we are already God—but of becoming conscious that we are God, but in our own unique way.

Never bow to an external “God”. God is internal, at your own core. Never bow to a monarch, to a celebrity, to the super rich. Never bow to money. Never bow to anyone or anything. And when no one bows, the power of the tyrants is abolished.

A Smart Society is readily achievable. All we need to do is abandon the idea that all human beings should be treated as an amorphous mass. No education system on earth gives a hoot about anyone’s psychological profile. No account whatever is taken of it. No part of the school curriculum is affected by it. Thus, all of the unique individuality of each student is scandalously ignored. All that matters is to process as many people as possible as cheaply as possible. They are given nothing more than a rudimentary education. Schools and even universities are just sausage machines, squeezing out undifferentiated gloop at the end of the line. Isn’t it time we started giving everyone a tailor-made education, one explicitly designed to maximise their potential?

5% of the world are dominant types. A major flaw of the personality classifications of Jung and Myers-Briggs is that they ignore the domination/submission axis. Be under no illusion, this is actually the defining force of our world. The world is the way it is because of the power relations between the dominant and the submissive.

In our world, the Old World Order are the earthly gods who must be obeyed. The OWO lust for power over others, and they are totally materialistic. The Illuminati are the polar opposite. The Illuminati are dominant introverts, dedicated to cosmic power—to idealism, spirituality, and ultimate knowledge. While the OWO look to the outer world, the Illuminati go instead to the inner world to find the answers to the outer world via the hermetic, alchemical principle of as above, so below. The OWO want to dominate others, the Illuminati to dominate themselves. The Illuminati seek self-mastery, self-overcoming, complete individuation in order to become God. The Illuminati aim to be cosmic divinities for all eternity, the OWO to be mortal, terrestrial gods.

Freud, a Jew, wrote of the Jews, “There is no doubt that they have a particularly high opinion of themselves, that they regard themselves as more distinguished, of higher standard, as superior to other peoples... We know the reason for this behaviour and what their secret treasure is. They really regard themselves as God’s chosen people.” There you have it. Straight from the horse’s mouth.

The approach of a soul towards God might be considered a strange attractor. Those souls that are in the basin of attraction are sucked into the strange attractor of divinity and chaotically make their way around the intricate pattern of the attractor, never repeating the same path. Every reincarnated life represents a new trajectory, a new opportunity. The only way to escape from the strange attractor is to achieve gnosis—ultimate enlightenment—at which point you become God. But what of souls outside the basin of attraction? These are the souls of the damned. Rather than being sucked into the strange attractor of divinity, rather than converging on God, they are repelled, they diverge and are pushed infinitely far from God. But in fact they then find themselves in the basin of attraction of another and opposite strange attractor: the Satan Attractor. They enter into a chaotic orbit around the endarkenment of the Dark Lord. They have no prospect of gnosis. They are permanently trapped. Only at the end of time when the entire physical universe is returned to its mental origins will they achieve salvation. The Old World Order belong to the Satanic Strange Attractor, as do the religions of Abraham. Illuminism is the religion of the divine strange attractor, the Abraxas Attractor. Are you in the basin of attraction of the divine? Are you already in a trajectory taking you around the Abraxas Attractor? If so, gnosis is possible for you. If not, you have no prospect of gnosis.

Thanks to Heisenberg's uncertainty principle and the existence of infinitely long irrational numbers it's impossible to ever know the precise starting conditions of any dynamic system, meaning that the cosmic "weather" is inherently unpredictable. Even God cannot predict the future. The idea that he knows the future is risible. No one does and no one can. The mathematical nature of the cosmos makes it impossible.

Persona—our false self. Shadow—our evil self. Anima/Animus—our missing self. Self—our True Self, our Higher Self, our Right Self. ———— T HE SECRET DESIRE OF the ego, its deepest longing, is to alchemically transmute itself into the Self, to metamorphose into the supreme actualisation of all that was once mere potential within it. We have to overcome our false self, confront our evil self, find our missing self and finally transform our ordinary self into our True Self which, in the last analysis, is none other than God. To make the journey from mortality to immortality, from the ordinary to the divine, from man to God, is the essence of our existence. It's our teleology, our purpose, our destiny to make that journey. When we are progressing well on our journey, we feel happy, but when we falter and fail, we are lost, aimless, purposeless, depressed, and anxious.

When the transformative energies of the collective unconscious are allowed to break through into consciousness, they bring about an overwhelming alteration and expansion of consciousness. When it happens in an uncontrolled way it can cause insanity, but when done as part of a painstaking method of enlightenment, it can lead to the attainment of the Higher Self, functioning at a far more advanced level than the old ego-consciousness was capable of.

Any new religion must pass the consciousness test. The Western esoteric tradition consisting of Gnosticism, Neoplatonism, Hermeticism and Alchemy has been nothing other than the pursuit of the highest level of consciousness possible—that of God. Only this tradition—which takes its highest form in Illuminism—has sought to scientifically, mathematically, philosophically, religiously and psychologically find God, the apex of consciousness. All other religions are false, evil, misguided, stupid, bicameral, deluded and futile. It cannot be stressed enough that what appears to us as the collective unconscious is none other than consciousness of God. Moreover, if we can master the collective unconscious and integrate it into consciousness then we too would be God.

“There is a God about whom you know nothing, because men have forgotten him. We call him by his name: ABRAXAS.”—Jung. In truth, we are bathed in the consciousness of Abraxas. Our minds are part of the Cosmic Mind. We are being drawn ever onwards and upwards by the God Attractor. For those with a sufficiently developed consciousness, a mental tractor beam grips them and draws them inexorably towards divinity.

Our only chance is to activate our hero archetype and take what is rightfully ours. The Illuminatus Maximilien Robespierre said in 1792, “What scruples shall shackle your zeal? ... The honour of nations consists of being free and virtuous, of striking down tyrants and avenging the people who have been debased. The glory of the National Convention consists of displaying strength of character and of sacrificing self-serving prejudices in the name of the sublime principles of reason and philosophy.”

Privilege is a product of private dynastic wealth. Privilege is the “right” of rich parents to pass on their wealth to their children and to buy advantages for their children that are not available to the children of poor parents, which accounts for most of us. We say that private wealth should never be allowed to destroy the chances of those who do not have access to it. We say that it is unacceptable for any society that advocates equal opportunities to tolerate privilege. Privilege and private wealth are incompatible with equal opportunities and meritocracy. You can choose either a Meritocratic world or a privileged world; you can’t have both. Everyone should be asked the question—are you for or against meritocracy? If you say you are against meritocracy then you have condemned yourself out of your own mouth and all meritocrats will unite against you and use their superior talent to destroy you. If you say you are for meritocracy then you must automatically agree with the position that dynastic private wealth and the ability of rich parents to purchase advantages are unacceptable since they bring intrinsically anti-meritocratic forces into society. NO PARENT HAS THE RIGHT TO BUY A BETTER EDUCATION FOR THEIR CHILDREN. By doing so they are depriving other children of equal opportunities and no one has conferred on anyone the right to sabotage others. No Law of All and Law for All could ever allow rich members of society to deny poor members of society an equal chance. And government that supports the rich against the poor is a plutocracy, an oligarchy and a tyranny, and must be overthrown. Meritocracy is very simple. It states that everyone should be given the same chances, and the most talented should come out on top and get the best jobs. Talent alone will determine the job you get, not the identity of your parents, or their wealth or their social connections. You will be judged on who you are, not on who your parents are.

The Hero-God Series—My Notes & Clippings

Humanity's greatest challenge is to overcome the trinity that has hitherto been most sacrosanct, most beyond reproach, most protected from criticism or any form of censure, whose legitimacy has never once been called into question, whose "rights" have never been challenged. That is why this trinity is the supreme obstacle, the last and highest barrier in the road to freedom, the most difficult to overcome. In truth it is the unholy trinity. Humanity can prove it is mature enough for divinity only when it at last confronts that triad of elements it never dared to doubt. The trinity of religion, wealth and family is the great dragon that must be slain if we are all to become heroes.

A nation should be in charge of its own banks. Every banker should be a government employee. All of the bosses of banks should be public servants—just like generals and admirals. No one in their right mind would allow a nation's military to be in private hands, so why is a private banking system tolerated? The military protect the nation from hostile foreign powers. The banking system should be about the protection and development of the economy, not about promoting the interests of private individuals. Once the banks are removed from private control—from the Zionists and Freemasons—then a sensible form of capitalism can be implemented. We are not communists. We do not advocate the abolition of capitalism. But who can doubt that a radically different form of capitalism is required from the one we have now?
