Many people won't have sex unless they "love" their partner i.e. place immense symbolic value on them. Many people can't perform sexually unless some fantasy is being fulfilled or some fetish satisfied. People rarely have pure sex in the animal sense. They have symbolic sex, which is something quite different. It comes garlanded with signs, and we must all be experts at understanding the signs if we want to please our partners. We have to tune into their symbolic representation of sex.

It would be absolute folly to attempt to resurrect communism or socialism in any way. The focus must be on capitalism, but on doing it properly. Contemporary capitalism is effectively bankrupt. It has proved disastrous in many ways, but it's much easier to rectify the problems of capitalism than those of socialism. The central problem of contemporary capitalism can be identified extremely rapidly: the capitalist elite. Those at the top of the tree have systematically manipulated and exploited the system to favour their own interests.

We say this to all Abrahamists—if you have any self-respect, abandon this self-degradation you have chosen for yourselves. Seek the light of the True God. He is no sadist, and he seeks no masochists. Become psychologically healthy. God is your guide, friend and ally. He is not the master and you are not his slaves.

iSex: Illuminati Sex (The Sex Series, #2) (Adam Weishaupt)

I have been unable to find this title available for purchase in the United Kingdom, so I haven't read it. Here's the cover text:

"Subdue your passion or it will subdue you." - Horace

The ancient Gnostics proclaimed a message of "Sin for Salvation". How can sinning save your soul? Why is Gnosticism so much healthier psychologically than the evil religions of Abrahamism: Judaism, Christianity and Islam?

This book by the Pythagorean Illuminati, the most ancient secret society in the world, shows how humanity took a disastrous wrong turning when it embraced the evil doctrines of Abrahamism.

Find out about the phenomena of the incubus, the succubus, St Vitus' Dance, St Anthony's Fire, the Flagellants, and Witches' covens. Discover the ancient Greek religion of Orphism, which underlies the philosophy of Plato. Learn about the Greek gods Apollo and Dionysus and the Roman god Janus. How do they define the human soul? Why is Plato's concept of "thymos" at the heart of the human condition?

Is the Biblical Jezebel a heroine rather than a villain? Is the Bible the tale of the Devil's control over the world in the shape of the psychopathic god Yahweh?

Read about Aleister Crowley, and the Hell-Fire Club. The world of sin is not what you think it is. Sin opens the gateway to paradise, and if you are ignorant of sin, you will never discover what lies beyond the gates of eternity.

Do not read this book if you are a closed-minded Abrahamist. The material provided by the Pythagorean Illuminati is not for petty, cheap, narrow-minded religious fanatics, only for radical freethinkers.

Individuation—the existence of individual things, including human beings—is made possible only because of the perception of space and time. Remove that perception, remove the distinctions of space and time, and everything collapses into cosmic unity.

One of the least satisfactory aspects of Schopenhauer's philosophy is his lack of attention to where rational contemplation originates. On the one hand, he characterises the noumenon as pure Will (not containing any rational component), and yet he talks of rational contemplation of the Platonic Forms as being the highest good. How can Will give rise to the capacity for contemplation? Shouldn't Schopenhauer have said that the noumenon is not Will alone but Will plus Reason? Therefore, the objective of life is to silence the Will (evil) while amplifying Reason (good).

Plotinus spoke of existence being composed of three main elements: the One (the mysterious origin of everything), the Nous (that contemplates the One and contains all the Platonic Forms) and the Psyche (split into a united upper half that contemplates the Nous, and a fragmentary lower half that gives rises to all of the individual things in the world).

Hegel placed rationality centre stage. For Hegel, existence unfolded according to a magnificent plan of pure rationality. The most precise dialectical logic guided everything towards its culmination in the Absolute: perfected existence, totally free, all knowing and all-powerful (God, in other words). Schopenhauer loathed Hegel, hence turned his back on the dialectic, the best way out of his labyrinth of existential evil.

It's for that reason that celebrity culture revolves around sex appeal. Anyone who can act as the lightning rod for global sexual desire becomes a god or goddess. The likes of Megan Fox, Beyonce, George Clooney, Brad Pitt, Rihanna and Angelina Jolie are objects of desire for billions of people. Yet these are all pale, bloodless divinities. They are what Judea-Christian capitalism uses to control us. Sex can be made so much more than the sanitized nonsense we are subjected to. Pagan sex is where the action is. Sex for salvation is the formula for life.

- Your Note at location 1418 | Added on Sunday, 25 February 2024 02:04:37

This line of argument is all very well, but it rather presupposes that the 'state' has already metamorphosed into a perfect expression of the 'General Will'. As things currently stand, the agents of the state are more concerned with political correctness and 'Common Purpose'-inspired control agendas than manifesting the finest flower of human potential. Sure, there are many imperfect beings bringing up their families and doubtless making all sorts of mistakes. At the cutting edge, it is still State agents, still flawed, imperfect humans, who implement this interface between the State and the individual. Society can only transition to a truly altruistic expression of the General Will via a process of evolution and education involving everyone and a common vision. At humanity's current level of evolution, I have more trust in the love that binds a family through its blood ties than this idealised 'State' to which the PI so frequently allude.

- Your Highlight at location 1380-1418 | Added on Sunday, 25 February 2024 02:04:37

Society surely has the absolute right to defend itself against out-of-control families that end up draining the resources of the State to no good end. The welfare state is nothing but a means of supporting failed families at immense expense. Shouldn't any intelligent society be spending the money that is absorbed by the "cost of failure" on trying to prevent the failure in the first place? And don't kid yourself about what that means. The State MUST take an interest in who is having children and how they are bringing them up, and it must intervene as soon as possible if the children are developing poorly, regardless of their parents' "rights". All right wingers are appalled by the thought of the State interfering with the family—but look at where not interfering has got us. Anything from a third to a half of all families are functionally fucked. That is a mind-boggling drain on the resources of the State and a spectacular waste of human potential. The only way to stop it is for the State to be absolutely ruthless about condemning poor parenting and preventing poor parents ruining their children's lives. One of the core struggles in human evolution revolves around the question of who knows best. Many parents and enemies of "big" government think that they always know better than the State. They are advocates of negative liberty, meaning that the State should leave them alone i.e. the emphasis is on being free FROM State interference.

- Your Note at location 1424 | Added on Sunday, 25 February 2024 02:20:17

There's another definition of positive vs. negative liberty that is altogether more sinister and controlling. 'Negative liberty' holds that humans are sovereign and free to do whatsoever they please, save those things which are forbidden by the Natural Law principle of not causing loss, harm or damage to another; and further, that government's power is lent to it by The People and constitutionally bounded. 'Positive Liberty', on the other hand, holds that the State is all-powerful and that people are only free to do those things expressly sanctioned by the State. To me, 'negative' liberty is freedom whereas so-called 'positive' liberty is in fact tyranny.

The State reflects the abilities of all of its citizens. The State contains geniuses. The average family certainly does not. If the State is allowed to function as the ultimate set of parents, calling on the expertise of its most insightful, clever and talented citizens, then is it not automatically vastly superior to the average nuclear family that, by definition, has nothing but the abilities of two mediocre and flawed adults to call upon?

I hate this relentless assault upon the family. I absolutely love my own family and I feel privileged to be a part of it. My family brings me joy, love, wonder and fulfilment. Of course we are all flawed, imperfect beings but I think we all recognise that and get by as best we can. It's an act of intolerance to go out in public wearing sectarian symbols. Others then have the right to treat you intolerantly. If you want tolerance, behave tolerantly; respect others; respect their right to have NO respect for your beliefs. No one has the right to have their beliefs respected, especially if their beliefs are repugnant.

ALL religious symbols should be banned from the public space. All burqas, crosses, crucifixes, skullcaps, hijabs, niqabs, tassels, wigs, weird religious clothes and hats are unacceptable in the public sphere. They are symbols of intolerance, and they must not be tolerated. In order to defend tolerance, the State must display absolute intolerance towards the intolerant. If you tolerate the intolerant then you yourself are condemned as intolerant. Toleration of intolerance IS intolerance since it allows the intolerant to flourish unchecked.

When Lucifer, the Angel of Light, is characterised as a man, it's actually a travesty of the history of the word. Although Illuminism is itself guilty of portraying Lucifer as male by longstanding convention, the Angel of Light should in fact be depicted as the principle of the Eternal Feminine, the quintessential female. Whereas Satan—the Eternal Masculine—is violent, aggressive, angry, bullying, selfish, narcissistic, individualistic, Lucifer is peaceful, loving, altruistic, compassionate, considerate, and an advocate of community.

Monotheism was a catastrophe because it destroyed the equality and balance of gods and goddesses. An utterly masculine god became the sole deity of the cosmos, and the world was immediately plunged into a disastrous relegation of the importance of women, and a sanctification of the worst aspects of the masculine. Yahweh = Allah = Christ = Satan = Id = masculinity in its darkest aspect is the true equation of monotheism.

Abrahamism has no place in the modern world. The reverence with which the ancient Egyptians treated Isis, the Phoenicians Ashtoreth, the Babylonians Ishtar and the Greeks Athena, Hera, Aphrodite and Demeter shows that they were much more enlightened than the monotheistic Abrahamists. We need to restore the importance of the ancient goddesses.

Plato believed that love was essential to the soul's relationship with the Forms. He thought that true love caused the soul's wings to grow. The experience of beauty and love in the mortal world compels the soul to remember its prior existence when it stood with the gods and feasted its eyes on the Forms, especially the Form of Beauty itself. That sublime memory fills the soul with a passion to once again directly gaze upon that wondrous Form. Love transforms us into winged angels again and we can move upwards once more, away from the material world. Love is our salvation, our redemption. It sets our sights on the loftiest heights. It raises our spirits. It inspires us and makes our minds contemplate the highest things. We escape from everything that is low and base in us. The lovers are inspired to go beyond their particular instance of love and beauty to the pursuit of the universal experience of love which is provided by the Form of Absolute Beauty. As Plato put it, “He who sees a godlike face or scene which is a good image of beauty shudders at first, and something of the old awe comes over him.” So, love is vital to the development of our souls. Love can lead us to gnosis. What combination is more powerful and transformative than love and knowledge? Is that not the supreme alchemy?

Illuminism, Hyperianism & Ontological Mathematics
The Sex Series—My Notes & Clippings

Parmenides argued that there is no such thing as change (all apparent change is illusory): everything is immutable being. Heraclitus, on the other hand, argued that change is all there is. Everything is becoming. Plato thought he had come up with the ideal synthesis of these opposing views. The eternal, unchanging realm of perfect Forms is pure being and reflects the position of Parmenides. The mortal world of decay and imperfection is always changing, in agreement with Heraclitus.

people inflict on others does not seem to be anything to do with stupidity, but with pre-meditated malice. Plato seems naïve when it comes to the question of evil. He was on much more solid ground in political terms. His ideas about the ideal state were based on the Illuminati's city-state of Tarentum in southern Italy, run by the accomplished philosopher, statesman and general Archytas—a Grand Master of the Illuminati. Plato met him and they became good friends. (Plato himself was once an Illuminatus, but was expelled for misdemeanours and never allowed to rejoin.)

Schopenhauer described as a “delusion” the notion that we ever act out of individual interests and desires. Instead, we are simply particular instances of universal desires. Through us, the universal expresses itself. It attains its ends through particulars—us. It can't do it any other way. A single, universal force is in fact impotent. It can achieve nothing until it finds a way to fragment into particulars.

Similarly, feeling types are defined by feelings, thinking types by thinking and intuitive types by intuition. When you really understand what this means you will comprehend that humanity is composed not of a single species but of several species. Their personalities are often so different that they are effectively incomprehensible to each other—like aliens from other worlds. The crucial importance of this point is that humanity acts as if it were “One” when in fact it is “Several”. Conflict is guaranteed because the different tribes have so little in common.

Steiner was of course a great scholar of Goethe, the Illuminati's greatest artistic genius. Someone asked us why we didn't rate Steiner above Carl Jung. The simple fact is that Steiner went off on many cranky and crazy excursions into the "spirit world"—where anyone can say anything about anything without any fear of contradiction. Jung's ideas always remained much more grounded and credible than those of Steiner, and his intuitions brought him extremely close to the position of the Illuminati (of which his grandfather was a member).
