There are only 6,000 members of the Illuminati: fewer than one in a million in a world population of some seven billion people. In a city like London, there are only eight members.

The Illuminati offer nothing of that kind. Meetings are infrequent. Special locations are selected for small gatherings and these change every year (they are always connected with locations across the world that have played critical and fateful parts in the history of the Illuminati). Many members have to expend a great effort in terms of travel, expense and their time to get to the chosen meeting place. The occasions are highly dramatic and spine tingling, as they must be when great religious mysteries are revealed.

Freemasonry was the creation of the Illuminati, but it must be emphasised that the Illuminati did not run Freemasonry. A few of the original Grand Masters were members of the Illuminati but because the number of Freemasons rapidly outstripped the total membership of the Illuminati, Freemasonry soon changed in character. "Undesirables" infiltrated it and the Illuminati lost control, with the disastrous consequences that are now all too apparent. Contemporary Freemasonry is an obscenity, a grotesque insult to the ideals on which it was founded. Whereas the original Freemasons were anti-establishment, determined to work against false religions, arrogant nobles and tyrannical kings, modern Masons are the central pillars of the oppressive regimes they once opposed. Freemasonry has been turned on its head.

Hold on just a second. If you read Hamilton's words literally, he merely says that God provided him with the wherewithal to achieve success, not that God somehow arranged for him to win. Even an Illuminist might agree with the former proposition. Having said that, I can easily believe that Hamilton might indeed think the latter way, as it is a typical Christian delusion to imagine that God is partisan in the petty affairs of men.

Those who start answering questions rather than asking them find themselves undergoing a subtle and then increasingly remarkable change. God is the being with all of the answers. The more you provide answers, the more you resemble God. It doesn't matter that your answers might start out spectacularly wrong. The very fact that you have come up with an answer at all is often far more of an achievement than most people can manage. As you gain practice and develop your skills, you will start to see that you find yourself answering problems everywhere, and your answers will become better and better. Paradoxically, you'll also start to ask far better questions, which in turn will help to refine your answers. A miraculous alchemy takes place. Bit by bit, your answers turn from lead into gold. Things that baffled you in the past become clear. You start forming a myriad of connections between all of your answers. You become smarter and smarter. And all because you changed from being a questioner to an answerer. Give it a try. When you read or hear something and you are puzzled, instead of asking questions, why don't you try to furnish your own answer, and then look for confirmation or refutation of your answer? Attempt to emulate God.

Elsewhere, the PI criticise Britain's Got Talent, of which American Idol is basically a rip-off. They claim that the audience revels in spectacle and the failure of the less talented contestants. However, from what I've seen, the BGT audience is extraordinarily generous and encouraging, to the point of making me feel embarrassed at my own lack of such generosity. Notwithstanding the validity of their claims about celebrity culture, superficiality, hyperrealism, etc., is not a talent competition inherently meritocratic?

The Templars were in fact a military branch of the Illuminati, and used many signs, including the skull and crossbones. In Hoc Signo Vinces is usually associated with the Sign of the Cross and, ostensibly, was used in this fashion by the Templars. In fact, as Gnostic Illuminists, the Templars rejected the Christian Cross. The sign they most venerated was the skull and crossbones, associated with “Baphomet”—Simon Magus, the most revered Grand Master of the Illuminati.

The ultimate political system is one that is designed to continually evolve to meet the needs of the time. The ultimate political system is one that always reflects the General Will of the people. The ultimate political system provides an equal opportunity for everyone. It prevents the creation of dynastic elites. It stops any individual or group from acquiring too many resources, too much power and wealth. It eliminates privilege, nepotism and cronyism. Meritocracy is that ultimate political system. It is the dialectical end-point. Meritocracy is the inevitable culmination of the long path of political evolution.

If this is true, doesn't it refute the oft-heard argument (from Prof. Richard Werner and others) that when banks lend money, the loan is new money created out of thin air?

- Your Highlight at location 3079-3093 | Added on Monday, 15 July 2024 00:03:59

The money creation aspect of this transaction is simply that the physical paper asset was transformed on the books of the bank to a receivable in the form of the loan. When the loan is repaid by the customer, the bank's asset account increases by $1000 and the loan receivable decreases by $1000, thus destroying the debt. In terms of the actual money supply, that is, the currency actually in circulation plus the demand deposits at banks, it increases when the loan is made and decreases when it is paid. There is no

Illuminism, Hyperianism & Ontological Mathematics
The Anti-Elite Series - My Notes & Clippings

thin air in the process at all, merely a transformation of the asset form. Since the reserves must remain above the set percentage of the bank's total demand deposits, the bank is strictly limited in the amount of lending they can actually do. When a large loan is made, it may reduce significantly the amount of subsequent lending that can be done, since the funds to make the loan are pulled from the bank's account at the Central Bank.

The only elements of meritocratic implementation that are not up for grabs are those that concern the defining principles of meritocracy, and there are only five of these, all of which are closely related. 1) Everyone must be judged on their own merits and not on those of others such as family, friends or colleagues. 2) No one should inherit wealth that their parents or relatives generated since that is a fundamental contradiction of the first rule of meritocracy. 3) All means of intentionally rigging the system to give some people an inbuilt advantage over others are unacceptable. 4) Money and power can never be used as weapons to secure the advantage of "chosen ones" at the expense of everyone else. 5) All forms of privilege as a means of creating a two-tier society of the privileged and the non-privileged are anathema. By "privilege", we mean an active programme for attempting to secure the permanent advantage of "chosen ones" at the expense of the non-chosen; in particular to buy a superior education unavailable to others, to buy influence, to create networks of "top jobs" that will be allocated only to the privileged elite, to create systems of signs based on status and snobbery that are favourable to one group but not to others. We will identify, expose and punish all people who attempt to subvert the meritocratic model through the use of privilege.

In the Hearts of Men, A Fire dwindles, In the Night' s black fen, our Spirit kindles The soul, the spirit of man, Our goal, to unleash it again. Into this world we plunge, Upon the face of uncertainty and Lunge A bright Spear, a flaming Arrow Seizing victory from defeat' s jaws So Narrow. The clock strikes in this final hour, As we rise against the tyrant' s power And cast down the yokes of shame, Taking up our swords & cloaks of flame And shine so brightly into the night, freeing our brethren of their darkest plight. To look upon a new world rising, Like the bright Morning star shining, heralding the end of night and the new day surmising, A bright new future, crying Alight! Alight! The night she falls, The Sun gleams, into the sky striding!

The Five Meritocratic Principles NO NEPOTISM 1) It's not who your parents are, it's who YOU are. NO CRONYISM 2) It's not what others can do for you, it's what YOU can do. NO DISCRIMINATION 3) Sex, race, religion, age, background are irrelevant. Talent is everything. EQUAL OPPORTUNITIES 4) You start from the same point as everyone else, and you go as far as your talents take you. REWARDING MERIT 5) The highest rewards for the highest achievers. Goals 1) To implement the five Meritocratic Principles. 2) To abolish the monarchy since it contradicts the first Meritocratic Principle. In a monarchy, the only thing that matter is the identity of your parents. In a meritocracy, your parents are irrelevant. The advent of meritocracy is accompanied by the automatic abolition of the monarchy. No meritocrat would seek the 'permission' of a monarch to govern. 3) To abolish the House of Lords (the House of Cronyism), which contradicts the second Meritocratic Principle since it's the product of patronage. In a properly constituted meritocratic system, there is no requirement for a second House. 4) To abolish Party Politics. Political parties are irrelevant in a meritocratic system. Parliament will be populated entirely by independent, meritocratic MPs with no set political affiliations (other than their commitment to meritocracy). 5) Each independent MP is selected on the basis of their merit relating to their field of expertise. So, the Chancellor of the Exchequer is selected from amongst practising economists (and will be elected only by other economists). The Secretary of State for Health will be someone who works in the health field (and is elected only by health workers); the Secretary for Defence will be from the armed forces; the Foreign Secretary a serving official in the Foreign Office; the Secretary of State for Education a serving teacher/headmaster/lecturer. In other words, MPs in the House of Commons won't represent a political party or a geographical constituency, but a particular field in which they have demonstrable experience, expertise and merit; and their constituents/voters will be people in the same field who can make an informed decision about their ability. 6) The Prime Minister will be elected by the MPs from amongst their number. Every five years, there will be a general election in which every MP has to seek the endorsement of their voters, or be replaced. 7) To abolish Cabinet Collective Responsibility. The principle that people should promote views with which they privately disagree is absurd and ipso facto brings politicians into disrepute. Why haven't they resigned if they disagree with a policy? How can they defend a position that they themselves don't believe in? If they publicly support a policy they privately reject, they are hypocrites. 8) Critiques of government policy will be provided by select committees of MPs. Special committees comprising scientists and philosophers may also be used, chosen because of their critical-thinking abilities and their expertise in challenging assumptions. Committees of artists, entrepreneurs and designers may also be called upon. Pressure groups will be given a prominent voice too since meritocracy welcomes close scrutiny. 9) To abolish the 'moralising' approach to politics (what's 'right' and what's 'wrong'—the politics of principle) in favour of the scientific method (what works and what doesn't—the politics of pragmatism). 10) To increase Inheritance Tax to 100%. No one should be able to posthumously transfer an advantage to another person of their choosing. The state should acquire all of the assets of the deceased and should reinvest them to advance the public good, particularly via education. 11) Education is the bedrock of merit, and should be accorded the highest importance in the meritocratic state. The current education system is a demonstrable failure and should be overhauled in every respect. Our education system is designed to produce shoppers (these being what capitalist democracies require to sustain their economic model). True education is the opposite of shopping. It liberates the mind, not the credit card. 12) To promote the ideas of the most radical, freethinking, independently minded philosophers e.g. Nietzsche, Baudrillard, Rousseau, Diogenes, Camus, the Situationist International. 13) To provide community-based alternatives to the family (based, for example, on the Kibbutz model) so that if a family fails, its members can be nurtured in a different, constructive and productive environment of psychological and educational well-being.

The Anti-Elite Series - My Notes & Clippings

Humans should be strong, autonomous, self-sufficient, independent, rational, creative, assertive, ambitious, adventurous, bold, disciplined, cognizant of the value of community, noble, honourable, trust worthy, unintimidated, free, magnificent and full of endeavour. They should never be docile, flock-like, herd-like, pack-like, submissive, tame, timid, domesticated, sedated, frightened, irrational, superstitious and prone to "faith". This raises the question of what, if any, are the true connections between the Nazis and the Illuminati. After Germany's defeat in WWI, the nation descended into chaos. The Illuminati saw a glorious opportunity to bring about a German Revolution based on paganism, Gnosticism and a New Enlightenment. It's true that three Gnostic secret societies, including the Illuminati, had connections with the milieu from which the Nazi Party emerged. The Illuminati knew several people who became prominent Nazis. The Grand Master of the Illuminati actually met Adolf Hitler in the early 1920s and found him interesting and impressive but clearly suffering from "Messiah Syndrome"—when a person becomes convinced that he personally (rather than as a part of a rational movement) has a divine mission to save his country or the world.

Nevertheless, the Illuminati were fascinated by the tactics and strategy invoked by Hitler. When Hitler came to power in 1933, Germany was beset by catastrophic economic difficulties and continual violent clashes between left- and right-wing parties. The liberal centre was paralysed and hopelessly ineffectual. Yet within an extremely short period, Germany was fully stable and prospering under Hitler's rule, albeit that its main activity was rebuilding the German war machine.

The Will becomes fundamental in chaotic situations. Those with the strongest will are those who triumph. If the prevailing Western economic and political paradigm of "liberal" capitalist democracy were to collapse tomorrow and the Meritocracy Party stepped in, no one can be in any doubt that extreme measures would have to be taken to entrench the new system. All actions have to be decisive, and the most radical measures must be taken IMMEDIATELY. The Revolution will be won or lost in the first 100 days. By the end of that period, the shape of the future must be apparent to all, and irreversible. The days of the rich would instantly be over. All of their assets would be seized (as happened in the Russian Revolution). A brand-new constitution would be declared setting out the philosophical principles of the new regime. All existing institutions inconsistent with the new constitution would be abolished. Of course, since there won't be any widespread rational agreement about what has to be done, the new government must be backed up by force—a "New Model Army" (France had a Revolutionary army, Russia had the Red Army and Hitler had the SA and SS). A new police service must be ready to step in. There must be a secret police to identify counter-revolutionaries.

It will be the best movie EVER.

"Capitalism at its most ferocious is a pure expression of psychopathy." He could equally have said psychopathy was all too apparent in leading military commanders, police chiefs, stock market traders, top lawyers, media moguls, religious leaders and politicians. Many of the people who get to the top do so precisely because they are psychopaths.

This is seriously flawed reasoning, a typical PI strawman argument: parents are too deeply flawed to bring up their own children, or families are locked in competition with each to get the best for their children. Sure, there's no doubt that some parents are incompetent or unsuitable, creating self-propagating generational failure. However, if the natural thesis is the nuclear or extended family, and the antithesis is state control of child-rearing, surely we should be aiming for a synthesis where, for example, philosophy, psychology and parenting skills are taught to everyone as part of the core curriculum? Apart from anything, making the best experts responsible for all child-raising simply isn't scalable. Surely the most achievable plan would be to optimise the family?

- Your Highlight at location 5630-5655 | Added on Tuesday, 30 July 2024 23:16:33

To put it another way, since the State can assemble the nation's greatest geniuses to determine how to bring up children in the best possible way while the family can, at best, muster only two religiously brainwashed, academically average parents, which of the two alternatives is likely to know best how to produce the finest, highest achieving children? You would need to be insane to trust the job to parents. And what about dysfunctional one-parent families, or families where the parents are working all hours, or where the parents are illiterate and of subnormal IQ, or where parents are alcoholics, religious fanatics, drug addicts, or where parents are suffering mental health problems, and so forth? How can this disastrous range of parental types lead to sensible, optimised outcomes? Why should children have their futures ruined by inept parents? But if all children are put under the full control of the State, they can all expect exactly the same maximised education, regardless of the failings of parents.

- Your Note at location 5865 | Added on Wednesday, 31 July 2024 12:24:17

As I've said repeatedly, I disagree with these sweeping, simplistic generalisations. For many, or maybe even most of us, family brings us love, joy, emotional and material support and encouragement. The notion that 'the state' could successfully supplant that at scale and at higher quality seems ludicrous. Far better to seek to optimise family, so the precious blood ties can achieve their highest expression.

The Meritocratic State would prefer to send the vast majority of children to boarding schools, where they can escape the parental environment. Below the level of the OWO are a group of people called the Gatekeepers. They are agents and middlemen; those who take a healthy cut of every transaction. They are parasites. They inflate the market so that their cut grows. They are editors, publishers, producers, talent scouts, advertisers, marketers, fashion setters, commentators, head-hunters, recruitment consultants, political lobbyists, gallery proprietors etc. Gatekeepers are those who set the tone for society. They decide what books get published, what art gets shown, what movies get made, what articles appear in newspapers and magazines. They choose which stories to highlight and which to bury. They decide whom the media should ridicule and whom they should protect. They take political positions. They promote certain agendas. They ensure that only the "right" people get through the doors. Gatekeepers, like the OWO, are usually Jewish or Masonic. They are well off, well connected, the public face of the establishment. They are mostly educated at private schools and elite colleges and universities. Often, they are related to members of the Old World Order. They are a filter between the people and the OWO. They look after their own. They invariably favour people who come from similar backgrounds, hold similar views and have similar tastes to themselves. It comes so naturally to them that often they don't even realise they're doing it.

One of the ancient initiation ceremonies of the Illuminati is described in the book [The Millionaires' Death Club]. That same ceremony has been appropriated in real life by the Skull and Bones secret society at Yale. Many symbols and ceremonies of the Illuminati have found their way, via Freemasonry (which was the creation of the Illuminati), to modern Masonic societies. Zionist bankers payroll American politics, resulting in a grotesque level of American support for the State of Israel, which violently stole the land of Palestinians, just as their ancestors violently stole the land of Canaan at the behest of their brutal war god Yahweh. 9/11 was caused by American support for Zionism. There would have been no 9/11 and no "War on Terror" if America had adopted the sensible position of remaining neutral in relation to Israel. Zionism has been a catastrophe for America, dragging it into costly wars that have made it one of the most unpopular nations in the world, just as hated as Israel is for its war crimes against the Palestinians. Gaza is effectively a concentration camp, or a walled-up ghetto like the ones the Jews themselves were once forced to endure by the Nazis. Unfortunately, the Muslims are as bad as the Jews. "Truthers" often condemn us for not taking their side over 9/11. Let's be clear about this. 9/11 was a martyrdom operation involving planes hijacked by Muslim fanatics. What's hard to understand? Everything about 9/11 fitted the precise modus operandi of Islamic radicals. Nothing about it fitted the modus operandi of the CIA/FBI/Mossad. Two plus two equals four, unless you can't count. Why would anyone in their right mind see 9/11 as anything other than extremist Muslims attacking America for its support of Zionism? Two plus two.

In order to maximise the potential of every person, the state needs to understand what motivates them, what inspires them, what they love, what their talents are, what makes them tick. Then it has to check on their progress, keep encouraging them, helping them if they are struggling, pushing them further and faster if they are excelling. In a very real sense, it has to “know” every citizen in order to help them to the fullest extent.

Democracy has a reboot button of sorts. It's called an election. A bad government can be voted out and a new one voted in to start the system afresh. The trouble is the new gang looks exactly like the old. Nothing changes. The power behind the throne is still there. The puppet-masters hidden by the curtain are the same as before. The democratic reboot button pretends to work, but doesn't. It's part of the great democratic illusion. Evangelical Protestantism can't be reset because it says that the Bible is the perfect, immutable and eternal word of God. Islam says the same thing about the Koran, and Judaism about the Torah. The Pope theoretically has the power to reboot Catholicism but since Catholicism claims that it represents eternal truth, it would be absurd if the Pope suddenly did the biggest U-turn in history. Therefore, theocratic regimes have no possibility of a reboot button. Mistakes cannot be corrected. Dictatorships have no reboot button either because the dictator can't afford to admit he's wrong. Only the dictator's death permits a regime reboot. Soviet communism had no reboot button because, being totalitarian, it was locked into an ideology that couldn't acknowledge error. Capitalism has no reboot button. Those families with capital remain the same generation after generation. A lucky few are admitted to the charmed circle of top capitalists and an unlucky few disappear because they died without heirs or committed some crime that couldn't be swept under the carpet, or gambled it all away or spent everything on living the high life—but those are rarities.

Societies, institutions, companies, banks, religions, political systems...none of them have reboot buttons. Violent revolution, bankruptcy and collapse are the only ways to reboot things that are failing disastrously. Hardly rational and efficient, wouldn't you agree? It needn't be like this. We can and must create a system that allows new generations to be released from the mistakes made by our ancestors. We can rocket-boost human evolution towards divinity if we know how to free the collective human mind of the junk and nonsense that has accumulated since the dawn of time.

All children should be protected by law from any attempt to brainwash them. Children should be taught as many different religions as possible, as well as atheism, agnosticism and skepticism, and all of these should be taught critically rather than “respectfully” i.e. their faults, flaws and illogicalities should be ruthlessly exposed and even ridiculed. Truth and reason should not defer to crazy beliefs just because they’re old and entrenched in society.

The Will to Actualisation is a revolutionary concept. From this, everything else flows. The Will to Actualisation is a ceaseless longing and yearning, an unstoppable craving and striving. What we call "desire" is the Will to Actualisation in its basic state. Without desire nothing can happen.

Slowly but surely the Will to Actualisation results in something truly wondrous—the birth of reason. Reason is the basis of planning and order. Ordered states can lead to states of higher order whereas perfectly random, chaotic states will always stay perfectly random and chaotic. Reason (order, planning, logic, the Logos), is something that emerges inexorably from the Will to Actualisation.

But mathematics on its own is insufficient. How can mathematics allow a judgement of what represents a higher state? Is a row of sixes more or less ordered than a column of fives? Is a circle better than an ellipse? How would a mathematical mind “know” that it had achieved something better than before? Two other factors are necessary: 1) Intuition. A mind must intuitively grasp that one state is higher than another, that it offers more potential, that it is associated with greater power. Intuition is a glimpse of the future.

2) Feeling. Some things make us feel “good” and others “bad”. Some things cause us pleasure and others pain. Some things make us feel we have increased our power, others that we have lost power. It is these emotional judgments that allow us to cut through endless mathematical patterns.

Plato wrote, “Whoever leaves private things unregulated by law and believes the people will be willing to live with the common and public things regulated by laws—is incorrect in his thinking.” This is a crucial statement. Any government that allows the private domain to be ignored in a society of great disparities in wealth is essentially supporting a society of privilege where private individuals are allowed to rig the system in their own favour. Thus, an unregulated private domain invariably leads to the richest private individuals controlling the state. This is the basis of the Old World Order.

Separate them from hostile psychological types and surround them with those with whom they will be friends and allies. Our society is sadly lacking in basic friendship. Teach each personality type how best to cope with opposite types, thus avoiding conflict and creating harmony. 5) Cultivate everyone's unique talents. Treat them all as potential geniuses for whom the sky is the limit. 6) Teach pupils how to think and ask questions. 7) Teach them how to avoid being brainwashed. 8) Teach them to aim for the stars. 9) Teach them lateral and critical thinking. 10) Teach them "deconstruction". 11) Teach them to challenge "sacred" texts.

Because of the requirement for celibacy, the priests have been overwhelmed by this denial of their sexuality, and it has erupted in the worst way. But here is an even more interesting revelation. Apparently, child abuse by Catholic priests is much lower than in other religions and amongst other adults who are in control of groups of children. So, the Catholic Church, once so powerful, is now an easy scapegoat, taking all the blame when it should be spread much more widely. Isn't it time we started holding enquiries into the levels of child abuse in all other religions? There should be sixteen parallel education systems, one for each Myers-Briggs type. The education provided will be perfect for each type, addressing students' strengths and avoiding their weaknesses. This will be the first time in history that students will get a bespoke education designed to draw out the best from them rather than just throwing a single curriculum at everyone. Children should receive this type of primary education from age 4 to 10. The purpose of this education is to ensure that everyone can read, write and count fluently, and to start identifying where their main interests and talents lie. In the secondary phase of the education system (from age 10—16), there are four education systems based on the four Keirsey "temperaments"—guardians, artisans, idealists and rationalists. This allows the mixing of introverts and extraverts. Secondary education provides everyone with a broad education across many subjects, culminating in the students' completing three final-year projects in the subjects that most interest them. The tertiary education system (from 16—21) involves the provision of the 10,000 hours said to be necessary to turn someone into an expert in any chosen field. The student, on the basis of his most successful project at the end of his secondary education, chooses the field he wishes to specialise in then gets five years of it at the most intense level. At 21, he is an expert in his field and can enter the workforce and make an instant impact at the highest level. He will be so expert that he could easily become the boss within a year.

There may be a fourth component of the education system (from 21—26)—the genius level. Those who have proved themselves the most expert in their fields will receive another 10,000 hours of education in the hope that they will go beyond the known bounds of their field and generate the new ideas that open up endless new possibilities for humanity.

Summary:

Age 4–10: primary education, based on the 16 Myers-Briggs categories.

Age 10-16: secondary education, based on the 4 Keirsey temperaments.

Age 16-21: tertiary education—the 10,000 hours (equivalent of a super-advanced Master's Degree).

Age 21-26: equivalent of a super-advanced PhD.

Do you want to know how to put the military-industrial complex out of business? Simple. Show close-ups of what cluster bombs do to the people they fall on. We in the West are never shown the results of the “handiwork” our armies do in our name. If we saw the hundreds of thousands of corpses torn apart by our bombs and bullets, we wouldn't dare to show our faces in the world.

Meritocracy is not any kind of woolly, soft, liberal, caring, sharing ideology. It is radical, tough, hard, ambitious, demanding and it has the greatest expectations of people, which they are expected to fulfil. The lazy, snivelling and inept won't be able to hide in a meritocracy. Meritocracy is an ideology of excellence and quality. It is explicitly intended and designed to be the best possible system for promoting human achievement and glory. The talented, the hard working, the geniuses, the movers and shakers will all be acclaimed and rewarded.

So, what we have described is the Illuminati's notorious "New World Order" that you've heard so much about over the years. Here's what it guarantees: The end of privilege. The end of the super-rich. The end of the Old World Order and all privileged elites. The end of Party politics and political lobbying. The end of private capitalism. The end of private banking (i.e. banking controlled by private institutions and individuals). The end of Abrahamism. The end of media moguls. The end of the abuse, mutilation and brainwashing of children. The end of existing armies, police forces and intelligence services that are the creatures of the elite and the enemies of the people. The end of all cartels and private networks of families, relatives, cronies, co-religionists, fellow Masons etc. Meritocracy. Equality of Opportunity. Equality before the law. Genuine equal rights immune from privilege. Public capitalism. Public banking. Dialectical politics. A New Model Army and Police Service based on intelligence and psychology rather than brute force. Tailor-made, psychology-based schools and academies. 10,000 hours to become an expert in your chosen field. This is no pipe dream. This is a hard-nosed political, philosophical, social and psychological program designed to dialectically perfect the human race. It is grounded in reason,

One could equally apply these words to your own blanket dismissal of all 'conspiracy theories' as baseless nonsense. You maintain wilful ignorance of a great many well documented facts. For example, re. 9/11, what about the aircraft/missile that didn't/did hit the Pentagon? Or the free-fall controlled demolition of Building 7? Or the insider trading that bet against United Airlines? Or the insurance changes? Or the simulation that ran concurrently with the real thing? There are many such anomalies in the official narrative. Why is it not credible that the Deep State would simply allow the terrorist attack to proceed in order to provide a pretext for introducing oppressive legislation and military adventures in Iraq and Afghanistan? After all, just look at Operation Gladio and the Strategy of Tension!

There are multiple possible syntheses of the stated dialectical pair. Here's one that is diametrically opposed to your own synthesis: Deep State elements of the US government knew about the plot but allowed Islamic terrorists to complete their mission, because it enabled certain domestic and geopolitical objectives.

Elite groups can wield control only over submissive, stupid, fearful sheeple. To bring elites to an end, it is necessary to revalue all values, reprogram the people, remove the brainwashing to which they've been subjected and to implement systems that produce smart, free, capable, talented, ambitious, independent, autonomous individuals who can see right through any attempts to condition and manipulate them. There is a profound religious mystery underlying the struggle on earth between the Illuminati and the Old World Order, but it has absolutely nothing to do with aliens or Nibiru. We are prepared to slowly release more information about this mystery, but as the nature of the mystery becomes clearer, you will start to understand why it is so powerful and so dangerous, and why the Old World Order have relentlessly tried to stamp out the freedom fighters of the Illuminati. Don't forget, there is one simple reason why the earth is a wicked and fallen world—it was created that way. But the message of hope of the Illuminati is that it does not have to remain that way. Gnosis—true knowledge of the workings of the world—can deliver us all. A great spiritual awakening is imminent.

No one has ever solved the clues without the intervention of Illuminati guides. In most cases, Illuminati guides will contact you only if you have taken a significant step towards the solution. On occasion, other candidates are selected if they have shown patience, resilience and genuine insight into the nature of the problem. It is often several years before candidates are contacted.

The Threefold Enigma The many persecutions throughout history that the Illuminati have endured have, on several occasions, placed their secret in great danger of discovery by their enemies. The ruling council of the Illuminati long ago decided to devise a sophisticated puzzle to conceal their secret—the Holy Grail—but at the same time offer clues and hope to seekers.

- Your Highlight at location 4674-4745 | Added on Tuesday, 27 August 2024 15:16:29

This is the text of a message that the Illuminati have sanctioned to be sent to a handful of seekers—six last year—who appeared to be of the right calibre to make meaningful headway with the enigma over the next few years. The Message “I have been instructed to inform you of the following, which you may or may not find useful. Perhaps it will give you an insight into the complexity of the challenge facing you, and indeed all seekers. Many seekers appreciate that they are confronting an immense problem, but most fail to perceive just how deliberately elaborate it is. It is for you to make your choices as you see fit. “There are three profound mysteries involved in the search for the Grail, two of which are fake and carefully designed to protect the real mystery. The two fake mysteries were formulated at the same time—by the ruling council—hundreds of years ago. The two fake mysteries are ingenious and each has a unique, convincing and sensational solution. The two fakes have more ‘public’ clues than the real mystery i.e. the clues are easier to find, though they are by no means easy to solve. Each of the mysteries, including the real one, is allowed to evolve in the sense that additional clues can be provided at any time, particularly by way of stories and paintings. But false clues are also laid. “There are intersection points between the three mysteries: certain key facts that all three have in common. Even if a seeker has become entrapped in one of the fake mysteries (both of which are as highly compelling as the real mystery), he will still have opportunities to switch to the real mystery if he makes the right choice at an intersection point. He will make the right choice only if he has the strength to abandon all of the work he has performed on either of the fake mysteries. This, in fact, is part of the test. Virtually no one makes the right choice because abandoning years of hard work is simply too difficult for most to contemplate, especially when they believe they have been making good progress. There is another trap: it is possible to move from one fake mystery to the other fake mystery, bypassing the true mystery. Several seekers have encountered this misfortune. “Anyone who makes significant progress on the real mystery will certainly be contacted, but must then undergo a long vetting process to ensure that they are not working for the enemy. The enemy has on two occasions come within one step of reaching the final stage of the real mystery. Preventing the enemy from accessing the final stage is paramount. “Your current status is classified as follows: you are making notable headway with one of the fake mysteries. You have encountered material that can direct you to an intersection point, but you have not yet moved in the right direction. You are deemed to have all of the necessary skills and attributes to move forward, but others have possessed such skills and attributes yet remained stuck in fruitless pursuit of fake mysteries. The fake mysteries are highly seductive but nevertheless valueless. No one has yet solved the fake mysteries, and some may even find them more alluring than the real mystery since they have implications that are as mind boggling as that of the real mystery, but they have not one particle of genuine evidence to substantiate them and are entirely speculative. (Imagine a painting that points, in an arcane way, to a manufactured mystery. A seeker might imagine that if he solves the painting's code, he will advance closer to the truth. In fact, he has merely come closer to a false "truth". But how would he know? That is always the dilemma.) The real mystery, on the other hand, is associated with indisputable evidence of its truth. If it did not have this evidence, it would long ago have been deemed unbelievable. "I hope this information proves useful to you. It is hoped that you will enjoy the greatest of good fortune in your quest, and, if you do, you will be contacted. I'm sorry that nothing more definite can be said at this time. It is true that a more active period has been entered and many clues may become visible within the next few years, from a number of different and often unexpected sources. People like you will be in the best position to find them, but you will also have to sift truth from deception, and it is in the nature of deception that it often comes in the most desirable forms, while the truth can be plain, unadorned and shunned. "Again, we offer you the greatest of good fortune. You are assuredly correct that he who is not searching for the Grail will never find it."

The Anti-Elite Series - My Notes & Clippings
