

The Five Horsemen of the Western Apocalypse

Destruction of the West and the New Dark Age to come

A brief personal view by Mike Glennon

Introduction

MANKIND SURGES EVER FASTER along the highway of history, learning more, achieving more and constantly improving his world. My maternal grandfather, who fought for four long years in the trenches of Flanders and France would not recognise what we see around us now in this, the third decade of the 21st Century.

Truly, we sit astride a Mount Everest of knowledge, which is growing exponentially by the year, unlocking ever more of the secrets of the material universe. Surely, Paradise on Earth is nigh – it is only a matter of time.

But let's pause and reflect on what Churchill once said about the passage of time: "The farther backward you can look, the farther forward you can see." History consists of strides forward, but also includes dire reversals, some of which have taken centuries to remedy. There is no inherent ratchet to prevent regression.

Ancient Rome was once the world's bastion of civilisation and yet it collapsed through its own decadence and the Dark Ages were to follow. Edwardian Europe was at a peak of scientific and cultural advancement and yet the horrors of the First World War were soon to unfold. A generation later the world plunged into an even greater holocaust, which consumed over 50 million lives, ruined a far greater number and heralded the Cold War.

The archaeological remnants of numerous great cultures are strewn around our planet, across Asia, Europe, Africa and the Americas. Clearly, there is no historical guarantee that the future has to be brighter than the present.

I put it to you that our world is in imminent danger of stumbling backwards into a new Dark Age, characterised by the destruction of sovereign democracy, self-determination of peoples, freedom of speech, freedom of association, freedom of movement and eventually freedom of thought itself.

Most people over the age of forty nowadays are conscious of a seemingly inexplicable surreality descending upon our Western World. It is almost a daily observation: “Things have gone mad around here!”

And yet the vast majority of people go no further than idle complaint and make no effort to reflect upon or research into what it is that is actually going mad. They don’t have enough time and probably they are more interested in last night’s football results or who is appearing in Strictly Come Dancing.

However, the evidence is out there in profusion if one just opens one’s mind and looks further than the mainstream media, which sets out to conceal and distract. Five fearsome predators are stalking the Western World and their combined efforts are the driving force behind the madness that we are experiencing.

Meanwhile, Government at all levels does its very best to confuse, to deceive and to deny. And the people slumber blissfully on.

A vast array of literature and statistics exist relating to the themes discussed below, but this booklet has the following objective: To provide a concise 10,000-word outline of these destructive components. An hour is all you will need to read this.

I describe the predators in the context of each other to illuminate the path that we currently tread, which is surely leading us to the total and irredeemable termination of Western culture and its replacement with a new Dark Age later this century.

The speed with which this is happening, is accelerating and the most pessimistic of forecasts may well prove optimistic when hindsight brings its inevitable judgement to bear.

In this booklet the terms The West and the Western World equate to Europe and its global diaspora and particularly to the Anglosphere, including the United Kingdom, USA, Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

CONTENTS

The Five Horsemen

Globalist Capitalism

Globalist Marxism

Imperialist Red China

Globalist Islam

Global Migration Explosion

The Enemy Within

Rise of Materialism and Fall of Spirituality

Wanton Progressive Liberalism

Subversive Academia

Toxic Mainstream Media

Surveillance and Identity Capture

Summary

Terra Nostra, Quo Vadis?

Winners, Losers and Last Chances

The Five Horsemen

Globalist Capitalism

THE INEQUALITY OF OWNERSHIP of wealth in this world of ours is sorrowful and timeless, despite the various political efforts of our age. In reality, the vast bulk of global wealth – and more importantly the influence and raw power it brings – rests in the hands of fewer than one million potentates. Empirical evidence bears this out and we don't need to go into swathes of statistics in this brief pamphlet, because you can find those elsewhere.

Wealth is lovely. But what is it actually that's so lovely? A silly question perhaps: plenty of nutritious food, decent clothing and a sound roof over one's head? Reliable transport, plenty of entertainment and a bit of travel?

Remember Maslow

BUT MONEY MEANS much more than that. Have a good look at Maslow's Hierarchy of Needs. Once creature comforts are assured, humans look for more, including freedom and independence. Once you have a glut of your own resource, you are no longer so servile to that tiresome line manager or unethical employer. In short you can do as you please, rather than being an intimidated wage slave. Acquiring financial security is what personal freedom and independence are all about. Well-prepared pensioners know this, although sadly most of us have to get older to reap such comforts.

Once you have attained this level, acquiring ever more resource brings little incremental, tangible benefit. Will your second Bentley or your third holiday home really make you any happier? If this were the case, then a million pounds or so would surely suffice.

But have you noticed the world doesn't quite work that way? Our one million potentates would be quite depressed if they were down to their last billion, so there must be something bigger still to aim for. Why would they want or need more resource?

Quite simply, Power. That most craved Holy Grail of humanity, the power to make others do what one wants them to do and this is where more money, much more money is required. In fact, one can't have enough of the stuff! With vast sums available, the potentates can smite their rivals aside without even breaking any laws. It brings carte blanche to ride vindictively, rough-shod over whomsoever they choose. Undeniably, such instincts have always lurked within humanity and always will, but it is worldly power that is the key to unleashing them. Power corrupts.

Powerful Motives

NO, THE GLOBALIST CAPITALISTS do not hanker after an extra yacht. They want control over businesses, corporations and ultimately governments and it is in this way that they aim to dominate the human population of this planet. Just as multi-national corporations are for sale, so are governments.

First, there is the overtly corrupt route through blatant personal bribery of senior politicians and officials, although implemented covertly, of course. This is the classic mechanism for manipulating governments in the developing countries of the Third World. The potentates would confirm this, although only to each other over discreet cocktails in Mayfair, Palm Springs or Zurich.

But surely this doesn't apply across the Western World? Well, generally not as much. One would like to say we are a bit more subtle, but actually we are a lot less subtle! Potentates simply buy political parties through financial donations. At the same time, the media networks (broadcast, print and on-line), which they control, bombard citizens with a prescribed political orthodoxy to promote their chosen puppets and ruthlessly exclude any counter publicity.

Gullible voters (after all, they haven't the time to read between the lines, as Spurs are playing tonight) vote as directed. Turkeys and Christmas come to mind. As for the politicians themselves, remember that the vast majority have one objective only: personal status - and they show a sublime indifference, as to whether they preside over a democratic state, a Marxist state, a capitalist state, a Sharia state or a banana republic.

Surprising what's for sale

SO, THE ELECTION IS WON by Party A and a new government is formed. And it is now time to accommodate the generous party donors. The reassuring thing is, however, that provided they favour these donors, the new government will enjoy the ongoing support of their regimented mainstream media. Accordingly, the public will continue to believe that day is night, that apples are oranges and that nobody has been sold a lemon. This status quo is particularly easy to enforce, of course, in a country with a medieval electoral system, such as the UK. The winner-takes-all system effectively guarantees a two-party state, where it is virtually impossible for any new philosophical input from other parties.

All the governing party then has to do is appear a tiny bit less bonkers than the other main alternative and its hegemony is assured. In Britain, that makes life particularly simple for one of the main parties, as it would have to labour extremely hard to appear more bonkers than the other one. Accordingly, once in power, the victor can revel in the supreme luxury of electoral dictatorship.

This is compounded further by the fact that the vast majority of voters vote with just one personal concern: their own pocket. Those better off vote Conservative for lower taxation, while those worse off vote Labour to try and screw more tax out of the fat cats and thus increase services and benefits for themselves. Any well-meaning Johnny-Come-Lately arriving on the scene, expounding noble notions, such as protect our planet, save humanity, animal welfare or fight for freedom will be effectively ignored.

In fact, by the time the potentates have set their media hounds on to them, they'll be very lucky to escape considerable personal persecution – and with little or no right of reply.

Claustrophobia sets in

HOWEVER, WE COME TO the point where Globalist Capitalism becomes intensely claustrophobic in a similar way to grain-farmers on the prairies of Nebraska. Operating their vast machinery in small fields was never cost-effective for them and so the hedges and fences had to be removed. Big farmers only want the terrestrial horizon as their fence-line.

Having to deal with a swathe of individual, sovereign, democratic governments, some of which may still have a vestigial electoral accountability to the wishes of their tiresome populations, is both worrying and threatening to our potentates, accustomed as they are to universal power over all of their minions.

So, sovereign democracies have to go if global populations are to be trained properly to shut up and do what they are told by their new masters and the puppet governments, which they control.

In fact, an ideal scenario for the potentates would be to cluster countries together and disenfranchise them all en-masse in one fell swoop. A supra-national bloc, where the individual self-determination of peoples is eroded to that point, where no citizen is remotely sure of where effective power lies or indeed what that power is or is not. Much simpler to harvest a stalk of Brussels sprouts than pick 27 swedes and turnips separately.

Here is truly a paradox: not strength in numbers, but frailty in numbers. Who but a fool cannot see the European Union as one prime example of this globalist mechanism?

There is an old saying: A fool and his money are soon parted. Alas, a fool and his freedom are parted much sooner. Viva Brexit.

New Aristocracy

SO, WHAT CONCLUSION have we with regard to Globalist Capitalism? A tiny fraction of humanity seeks to elevate itself to a new global aristocracy with the clear aim of controlling our whole species and planet. Any entity standing in their way will face destructive sanctions and intimidation.

The potentates include household names and institutions, such as multi-national entrepreneurs, international currency speculators, banking dynasties, historic monarchies and even those lords of the underworld, who drive global organised crime.

Potentially the most sinister of the corporate predators are, of course, the hi-tech giants, whose ability to infiltrate and thus potentially control every tendril of the world's personal, corporate and governmental communications, social networking and purchasing activity gives them power unimaginable. This is amplified further by the fact that in many cases a tiny number of their founding shareholders, through clever structuring of share capital, hold virtually total power over the strategy of those giants.

We are talking here about a cabal of global warlords, which cannot be resisted by private individuals or organisations. Only the world's major governments have the slightest chance of containing them, but these warlords – as mentioned earlier – find it all too easy to buy those governments through the funding of political parties.

Indeed, any sovereign nation attempting a rebellion against these predators could find itself digitally paralysed in very short order. Truly, the pistol is against our heads.

The target prey of these Globalist Capitalists are the remaining sovereign, democratic states of the Western World and that is why every effort is being made by them to undermine and erode the traditional cultural fabric of historic nations, the indigenous Europeans being prime examples.

Globalist Marxism

WHAT A PARADOX it would be if Globalist Capitalism and Globalist Marxism were seen to be marching in step together. How can they conceivably be sharing any goals whatsoever? Well, just read on and we shall soon see.

Socialism, Communism and Marxism hold the basic premise that we are all equal and that global society must be driven ever further from the underlying realities of nature (fundamentally unequal) to the Utopia of Equality. Actually, it does seem quite seductive at first glance and the aim of sharing the world's resources more fairly is surely laudable. However, the reality is far more difficult, as a lady, whose second name was Hilda, once wryly observed: "The problem with socialism is that you eventually run out of other people's money."

Thomas, Richard and Harold

PROBLEM IS THAT EQUALITY demands that nobody gets more than his neighbour. So, if Tom is lazy, then there is no point in Dick working hard, as any surplus his labours generate will be taken from him. Harry is even lazier than Tom, so soon Tom starts to back off too. Poor old Dick, however is an exceptional grafter and you can't keep a good human down. Sooner or later the community, however, will have to keep him down, because he's starting to rock the boat. Accordingly, there is a need for a higher authority to step in and to enforce equality. As Churchill once reflected: "Socialism is inseparably interwoven with totalitarianism and the abject worship of the state." Historic evidence abounds.

Extreme left-wing philosophy takes us down a well-trodden path and the trouble is that Marxists will never be content with achieving their alleged Utopia within their own territorial boundaries. They look over the garden fence and set out to enforce their philosophy on their neighbours. So here, as with the Globalist Capitalists, they come up against hedges and fences, which they need to demolish if they are to pursue their aims.

Demographic Arson

CONSEQUENTLY, INDIVIDUAL, SOVEREIGN western countries, populated by free-thinking, entrepreneurial citizens are a prime target for destruction. Their theoretical ability to select their own form of government is a curse to the Marxists and so any tactics to weaken, dismantle and destroy free democracy will be deployed.

Exploitation of any internal cultural frictions is a prime weapon and this is being used right across the Western World: the deliberate stoking of racial tensions to begin breaking down national stability. The international Antifa movement is working flat out to ignite and fan these flames. Migrants, who gratefully settled in western host countries, because of horrible living conditions inherent within their own lands, are being encouraged towards the destruction of their hosts' infrastructure, culture, traditions and values. In other words, destroying the salvation they sought here in the first place.

The notion that current indigenous western populations somehow carry a communal, historic guilt is simply fatuous. I have not myself committed any crimes against other peoples, nor did my parents, grandparents, nor great-grandparents.

Yes, history is full of events that were wrong, including the Turkish genocide of Armenians during the first world war and the inter-tribal genocides throughout Africa in recent decades. Slavery was wrong, very wrong, including the massive Muslim involvement in slavery throughout the centuries, which endured long before and long after European involvement. Remember also that North African Muslims regularly raided indigenous European populations, hence the chorus lyrics to Rule Britannia, exhorting the nation to establish strong naval protection to prevent Britons being carried off by marauding foreign slave traders.

How despicable that the BBC under Marxist pressure in the Autumn of 2020 dallied with banning the singing of Rule Britannia at the Last Night of the Proms concert. Crass ignorance fashioned to suit a grotesque, biased agenda.

Meanwhile, let us not forget the complicity of native populations themselves in capturing and trading their fellows. Nigerian journalist and novelist, Adaobi Tricia Nwaubani, wrote about her great-grandfather of the Igbo ethnic group, who dealt in a number of goods, including tobacco, palm produce and also human beings. He had agents who captured slaves and brought them to him, the concept of human equality being completely alien to traditional religion and law in his society. The uncomfortable and much-concealed truth is that most of the actual capture of slaves from the African interior was carried out by native people.

It has been mooted that so-called whites should be paying reparations to so-called blacks even now. But hang on, what is a white person and what is a black person? Let's say one of my own great-grandparents was Kenyan, which would make me one eighth "of colour". So, should I claim one eighth of such a compensation? Should the other seven eighths of me pay seven eighths of such a compensation, compared with a full payment from someone without any non-white ancestry? What about a person "of colour", who has half white ancestry? Would the two halves cancel each other out with regard to compensation liability?

My neighbour might be Tanzanian and yet none of his ancestors were ever slaves. And what about Africans whose ancestors were robustly complicit in the slave trade? My own wife is Malaysian, but has lived most of her life in the UK. Does her underlying ethnicity give her automatic immunity to such considerations or is it only so-called white people who carry potential historic guilt? In any case, where will the reliable, tangible evidence ever come from, as to what any of our ancestors were up to in by-gone times?

Should the English seek reparations from France to compensate for the destruction of our culture from 1066 – or from Scandinavia for earlier Norse incursions? Let us see written, rational proposals and formulae from those who advocate historical compensations. None of this is at odds with our universal condemnation of historic iniquities, but let us take an honest, objective approach.

Destructive Streak

MANIFESTATIONS OF CONCERTED western cultural destruction now include vandalism of public places, forced renaming of streets and buildings, as well as violent attacks on the police, who are now themselves effectively in broad surrender to Marxist anarchism. Riots around Britain during 2020 illustrated only too clearly police willingness to genuflect to subversive alien elements.

Meanwhile, our morally bankrupt mainstream media merely describe these violent, left-wing anarchist criminals as Activists, almost a term of heroic endearment, while any counter demonstrations by law-abiding, peaceful patriots are labelled as racist, fascist and Nazi and are ruthlessly suppressed by a partisan police force and judiciary.

The reality is that ample opportunity is open to all factions within British society and has been for generations, but what is missed, is that people have to grasp those opportunities themselves if they are to succeed. Many are simply not doing this and then they blame the rest of our society for their own shortcomings.

Hardly surprising that most indigenous Britons are petrified into silence for fear of violent retribution by anarchic thugs, (who would likely go unpunished), the loss of their own jobs or study places and the distinct possibility of prosecution under the modern concoction of hate crime, which has become a political obsession.

Meanwhile, huge numbers of police officers in London are allocated to investigating this, while actual, lethal knife and gun violence makes certain parts of our capital city seem more like The Wild West. Small surprise when one considers who runs London!

It is also noteworthy how little participation there is in this violent crime wave by the indigenous population (except as victims, of course), although this is all hushed up by carefully massaged Government statistics.

Hobbits Beware

FREEDOM OF ASSOCIATION and even physical movement are also threatened, as these fast-emerging no-go areas make it dangerous for indigenous Britons to roam freely.

Already there are urban neighbourhoods across the country, where a woman walking her dog would be intimidated by alien people, who view dogs as vermin. Young women cannot walk certain streets attired as they so choose. A man cannot drink a can of beer in the street and pubs are disappearing, as targeted sectarian vandalism would make it impossible for them to trade. People who are not of mainstream sexuality are forced to conceal their true persuasions of dress and behaviour for fear of being beaten up.

What is happening now in cities will gradually filter through to rural England in the coming years. Many people reading this booklet, may express incredulity, but only because they happen to live in areas as yet hardly affected. Out of sight out of mind.

J.R.R.Tolkien portrayed only too vividly what happens once the serene Shire is infiltrated.

Meanwhile, the UK Government has been sending around £14 billion of taxpayers' money overseas every year, a substantial part of it to regimes which despise us. This equates to more than the Home Office budget - in other words our total expenditure on policing, counter-terrorism, crime & punishment, fire & rescue, immigration control and the battle to contain drugs abuse.

So, to summarise thus far: We have the Globalist Marxists, underpinned by pseudo-intellectual, metropolitan hypocrites, sharing the same objectives as Globalist Capitalism, namely the dismantling of the West. Two massive, terrifying enemies of the democratic world marching closely side by side, though both seemingly oblivious to whom they have allied themselves.

But, it gets worse than that. Read on.

Imperialist Red China

THROUGHOUT HISTORY THE BALANCE of power has ebbed and flowed around the world. Empires and dynasties have risen and fallen and the Europeans had their turn, although the self-destruction of two mainly European-focused world wars brought their dominant era to an end.

After 1945 the United States of America and the Soviet Union assumed the imperial mantle, although the latter effectively imploded as the intolerable realities of Marxism bleached away the very heart and soul of its people. But what of the USA?

The American Interlude

AFTER THE FALL OF the Iron Curtain, the USA emerged as the only global superpower and it has become the effective world leader in terms of commercial, cultural and military reach. The world's computer infrastructure is defined through American technology, as are aerospace and global communications. Global entertainment is dominated by American film and music - and where in the world could a tourist not dine in gastronomic bliss at a McDonalds, Burger King or KFC?

Perceptions of Americanism span the widest of spectra from rampant, jingoistic hyper-patriotism within parts of that country itself to utter hatred among certain alternative cultures around the world. Whatever your opinions, however, it is worth reflecting upon some of the issues surrounding America's contemporary global role.

This global leader is democratic, indeed displaying the most sophisticated democratic governance model in the world. All levels of political power are subject to accountabilities back to the democratic process and thus to the people. American leaders, all of them from president right down to county police chief, can be removed and will have to carry the majority of public support or fail in the longer term.

Opportunity abounds in the USA as nowhere else on earth; paupers can become billionaires and a black man can become president. The fact that it is a land of economic inequality is hardly unique, but nobody can deny that there is bountiful opportunity for those really determined to grasp it and succeed. Success need not mean becoming president, it might just mean owning your own business and making a prosperous living for your family.

Freedom of speech is more possible in the USA than virtually anywhere else in the world and it is enshrined in their constitution, as are freedom of movement, association and religious worship.

One realises that theories and realities are not always congruent, but without the right underlying principles there can be no satisfactory outcome.

As a result of the 2020 US Presidential election, however, we now see a new regime, which is far less committed to upholding the traditional values of America. A new socialism is unfolding there, which, whilst beneficial to some, will surely undermine the essence of what America is all about and bring a steady dismantling of the world's most powerful democracy. In the longer term, clear cultural rifts between States could well herald an era of secession. All of this is pure delight to the Globalist Capitalists and the Globalist Marxists. Now, let us appraise the direction in which the balance of global power is tilting as we proceed through the 21st Century.

Red Sky in the Warning

IMPERIALIST RED CHINA has surged from an impoverished, backward country to a world super-power within a couple of generations and is now the world's second largest economy, tipped to become number one later this decade. The ecstatic glee with which our western progressive liberals and their university-indoctrinated, group-think offspring welcome the decline of the USA is palpable. Nor is this just a reaction to the presidency of Donald Trump, because it was already woefully apparent during the reign of the liberal Barack Obama.

Red China has enthusiastically destabilised the balance of global trade during 30 years of expansionism. Nobody can criticise economic ambition, but the regime has pursued a policy of rampant protectionism, while flooding our western markets with low-cost products, generated by a highly suppressed workforce, which enjoys virtually no employment rights, minimum wages or collective bargaining. Western health & safety standards do not exist.

It is amazing that western developed countries have not applied commensurate trade tariffs, but the innate consumerist greed in those countries has pressured their governments to keep the flood gates wide open. Indeed, western manufacturers, if denied the huge supply of cheap components from China, would soon see their own end-product exports fall in competitiveness. How ironic that the EU tried to bully the UK into a Brexit deal that would prevent the UK pursuing competitive advantage, while the EU merrily accepts Chinese advantage based on abusive human exploitation!

Let us also contrast the meek appeasement of China with the savage western sanctions against the erstwhile apartheid South Africa. The latter was no more evil than the former, but we turn a blind, materialistic eye when it suits our pockets. We now have a global debt imbalance of titanic proportions, where China has lent ever more money to the West to continue buying ever more Chinese goods, which turbo-charges Chinese expansion further. Yet little of this can be blamed fairly and squarely on China.

Total Means Total

MORBID APPREHENSION HINGES much less on these issues than upon the very nature of the Chinese state. It is wholly totalitarian, utterly unaccountable and controls its population in every aspect of life and philosophy, tolerating zero dissent. Any who fall foul of the Communist Party simply disappear. Internal racial minorities like the Uighurs are persecuted, erstwhile independent cultures like Tibet ruthlessly suppressed and Hong Kong is now firmly on its way to full subjugation.

China has applied a rampant imperialism across sub-Saharan Africa in pursuit of raw materials and even courts western territories, such as Greenland, with the bait of infrastructure incentives. It intimidates smaller states in the Far East with its burgeoning economic and military capability, including pressurising them in their own respective foreign policy towards certain states that China may disapprove of. Taiwan – or more officially the Republic of China - has languished in oriental Coventry for many decades.

Steady Infiltration

AT THE SAME TIME, China's infiltration of western corporate and real estate infrastructure has surged on at a ferocious pace and nowadays great tracts of our capital cities – and stock markets – are owned and controlled from Beijing.

Millions of privileged Chinese students are sent to Europe every year - and the UK in particular - to gain a thorough familiarisation with western countries and languages, which are clearly earmarked as China's future spheres of influence – don't be afraid to read that as China's future western colonies!

This growing capability to infiltrate the West is accentuated by the surge in prowess of the Chinese hi-tech corporations, which are already starting to rival the Silicon Valley giants. Given that their corporations are wholly under the control of a totalitarian regime, this should be a stark warning to consumers and governments that embracing their products is hugely dangerous for the West.

There are also clear signs that China's military might is being augmented by high-level cyber warfare capability and one particular Anglosphere state has already hinted broadly that it has been attacked. A taste of things soon to come? Let us be quite clear on this: a concerted cyber warfare campaign could topple any sovereign state within days. It would have the potential to paralyse every tendril of personal, commercial, financial and governmental activity overnight.

This is a catastrophe waiting to happen and is only held in check, because the world's super-powers, both governmental and commercial, realise that mutual destruction would be the outcome. However, what will happen when one power feels it has the technology to fully insulate its own cyber systems, thus opening up the opportunity for a global cyber coup. Only Red China wields the internal power to achieve such a level of dominance.

One Flu over the Cuckoo's Nest

IN 2020 THE WORLD'S FIRST global crisis for 70 years emerged, raged and casually mauled the global economy and it all originated from Red China. Investigating the scientific background to this pandemic is virtually impossible, because the Communist Party precludes any freedom to carry out objective research. Citizens who pose questions simply disappear.

International agencies seeking scientific data relating to the outbreak are routinely obstructed and western governments meekly accept this, unsure what else to do. The Covid-19 jury is still out, but we haven't heard the end of this. Maybe Covid-22 will put it back on the agenda? One thing is for sure, the plague decimated western economies in a way that would scarcely affect the longer term fortunes of a command economy like that of Red China. Natural market forces can be largely by-passed when one simply commands all suppliers, all consumers and all workers. As it happens, 2020 was the Year of the Rat. Smell anything?

Meanwhile, as at the time of writing, the UK has recently sent over £70 million of foreign aid to China. Maybe this helped them with their latest moon landing? It is hard to believe that our own Government squanders British taxpayers' money in this way.

Who Cares? You?

SO, WHO WILL STAND UP to them? Of our western leaders there was only one and the liberals and mainstream media hounded him with ferocious zeal at every turn. His successor now stands for meek appeasement. So, let us contemplate who will be future world leader. Already, 2028 is being predicted as the year when Chinese GDP eclipses that of the USA. With such obvious glee at every weakening of the USA, one can only assume that vast swathes of liberal humanity long for the embrace of brutal totalitarianism. They are simply too naive to realise what it is they long for.

Globalist Islam

THE THREE CATEGORIES outlined above, Globalist Capitalism, Globalist Marxism and Imperialist Red China, all share a notion of materialism on earth and the way that physical resources should be deployed, dominated, hoarded or shared. This is where Islam is fundamentally different. It concerns itself little with the material, but mainly with the spiritual. It is, after all, a religion and arguably one of the least materialistic.

Each to their Own?

THOSE RELIGIONS THAT CONCENTRATE merely on their own philosophies and leave others to follow theirs bring no dangers. What earthly problems does Buddhism cause? With Islam, however, we have an invasive, quasi-political philosophy, stridently claiming its superiority over all others. Followers attempting critical debate of Islam will be threatened with extreme violence and death, because only total submission (which is the implicit meaning of Islam) is acceptable. It is the antithesis of libertarian values.

The religion sets its own laws and its followers blatantly defy the sovereign legal codes of host nations. Examples: family law (including marriage and polygamy); misogyny; female genital mutilation (hardly any prosecutions in the UK, despite being widely practised); homophobia; paedophilia (grooming gangs in the UK left untouched by our stunned police and social services for a decade before any meaningful action was taken) and animal welfare (millions of animals slaughtered in agony every year completely unnecessarily).

According to the Office for National Statistics in 2018 its followers in the UK numbered 3.4 million. It is the second largest religion in the country and is increasing at a rapid pace, while the indigenous British population is falling fast. Await the next census!

Tipping Point Coming

SHRINKING POPULATIONS ARE A BLESSING in the face of global environmental threats, as over-population is the driver of our own destruction. The demographic reality, however, is that we are fast heading for that day when the indigenous British will be a minority in their own land. When that time comes, it will not be about alien cultures defying British law, it will be about alien cultures imposing their laws upon the British. The imposition will be brutal, as it is currently across the Third World, where Islam is rapidly ousting other cultures and pursuing radical ethnic cleansing.

Terror? It's hardly started!

MEANWHILE THE ETERNAL SAGA of brutal terrorist atrocities against non-believers continues and would be infinitely higher were it not for our existing, hugely costly levels of counter-terrorism surveillance and intelligence gathering. The liberal, open western democracies are like sheep waiting in an abattoir to have their throats slit. An alien terrorist organisation could quite easily during one Sunday afternoon topple global financial systems with two men on a motorcycle with a small supply of moderately radioactive liquid. Even a modest sprinkling of the streets of the financial districts of New York, London or Frankfurt would see financial services workforces off work for weeks, while cleaning up operations ensued. Couldn't happen? No, neither could 9/11.

As the population balance of western states tips inexorably towards indigenous peoples becoming a minority, we will see inevitably the termination of our traditional sovereign cultures. In this respect, Globalist Capitalism, Globalist Marxism and Imperialist Red China march shoulder to shoulder with another fearsome ally.

In the current era, the political forces of Islam have happily sheltered within the left-wing political parties and Britain is a prime example. The Marxist desire to destroy the West finds solace in Islamic population growth and courts their votes. No wonder anti-Semitism has been such an issue in one particular British political party. The time is almost upon us, however, when a major Islamic political party will be launched in Britain and almost immediately will take control of countless District, Borough, County and Unitary Councils across the country. Their strong and growing contingent of MPs at Westminster and the devolved assemblies will exert ever more influence, in the shorter term perhaps through holding the balance of power, but ultimately complete power.

Global Migration Explosion

THERE ARE ALREADY in excess of 7,600,000,000 people on this planet and that is predicted to rise to 11,200,000,000 by the end of the century. Whilst world overpopulation poses a seemingly insurmountable challenge, that does not mean that individual states cannot and should not stem that tide within their own borders.

In the early 1950's the UK approached a T-junction. It had the choice of turning left or right and our political masters chose to turn left. Before we remind ourselves of the route we actually took, let us speculate on what would have happened had we turned right.

Where was the Map?

TURNING RIGHT WOULD have entailed a virtual block on immigration into the UK. After all, the 45 million indigenous people had already managed to survive the greatest test of strength and endurance in history, the Second World War. We had stood alone initially and had been the biggest single component in the defeat of Nazi Germany and without the courage and fortitude of the British people the world would have descended irremediably into the abyss of totalitarian tyranny. Our crucial achievement in this was courtesy of our global pre-eminence in science, technology and innovation.

We had been a cultural, artistic, literary and philosophical beacon for the planet. Facts, not opinions, although the progressive liberal, Britain-hating luvvies would have you believe otherwise.

Paradise Lost?

FOR ANYONE TO PRETEND, therefore, that the UK could not have survived and thrived in modern times without constant waves of immigration is utterly absurd. Had we taken that other turning, the population of the UK would have fallen to well below what it had been in the 1940s, one homogenous nation, sharing the same culture, customs, values and language. It is at this point that we are always perversely warned that substantial population reductions are a disaster, because demographic age imbalances will mean there would not be enough young people to look after the old. This is a self-defeating argument, as it implies that the world must accept massive over-population forever, rather than address the main problem. Yes, there would be a period of imbalance that would present social challenges, but this would surely be overcome and that particular population would emerge a generation later as a re-balanced, smaller, sustainable entity.

Think of how Britain might now be: much lower volume of road traffic, affordability of land and thus housing, low crime levels, lack of terrorism, community cohesion, more positive attitudes towards animal welfare and immense environmental benefits. Of course, it would not have been a Utopia, but would it be better than what we now have? Let the reader reflect upon that question.

Where was the Sat-Nav?

BUT, NO, WE TURNED LEFT. And so what do we have now? A fast escalating population of around 80 million. Do not believe Government estimates of population numbers. If one wants to know true numbers, just look behind you – quite literally. The people who know all about numbers are the giant retail associations and they can see clearly that the number of toilet rolls consumed in a year suggests these much higher population numbers. The lavatory, unlike Government, does not lie.

We have multi-cultural, multi-lingual fragmentation, which gets worse by the year. Witness civil unrest, rioting, systematic vandalism, violent crime, terrorism, no-go areas and the constant denigration and rejection of Britishness, as though we are judged to be the most inferior of people. Welcome to happy, inclusive, modern Britain, though many prosperous, hypocritical, progressive liberals are still able to insulate themselves from it for the time being.

This dismal, factual reality is a real god-send to the Marxist anarchists, who seek to finish off the institutions of this and other western democracies and replace them with their Globalist New World Order, where there will be no place whatsoever for our western indigenous cultures.

They ignore the fact that it was these very cultures that made the Western World a magnet to the countless millions, who flocked here during the last 70 years. By 2020 the number of foreign-born people residing in the UK was almost 10 million and well over half the births in London were to mothers born outside of the UK. And this is just the tip of the iceberg when one takes into account the cumulative demographic multiplier effect over time.

We are lost. Where the heck are we?

THAT IS WHERE WE ARE now, as we contemplate the third decade of this century. There is an old saying and a wise one: When you have dug yourself into a hole, stop digging. But, alas, the picks and shovels are still furiously at work.

At the vanguard of Globalism is the United Nations, which, courtesy of the number of countries on earth, is dominated by Third World nations. According to the UN there were in 2019 272 million migrants in the world, 82 million of them living in Europe. Yet another 59 million are defined as refugees, also by definition seeking a new home.

The 2018 UN Global Compact for Migration affirms - among its mind-numbing, repetitive clauses - the aim to “facilitate safe, orderly and regular migration” and further “recognizes that ... regular migration works for all.” All too clearly, the migration business is in powerful and determined hands.

Whilst no reasonable person has a problem with pursuing “safety or orderliness” among mankind, what is this “regular” part of the equation? It can only be interpreted that there is a commitment to ongoing and ceaseless migration and that there is only one direction of travel, that is migration into the West. A UK population of well over 100 million will be inevitable.

How that is going to work out for our highly-developed, already overcrowded sovereign states, and what the considerations are for the indigenous populations of those states, is given no consideration.

Can't even see the road any more!

MORE BIZARRELY, WE NOW HAVE a British Government contemplating the invitation into the UK of potentially another three million people from Hong Kong, as some sort of game of bluff with Red China. On which of the vast empty plains of Surrey and Essex would such immigrants be settled? A question nobody wants to answer - maybe because virtually nobody is asking it?

A wise politician reflecting on immigration policy back in the late 1960s once commented, “We must be mad”. It seems madness has now become so entrenched in this land that we are no longer even able to recognise it when it screams at us. In fact, anyone arguing nowadays against madness is likely to be committed.

How convenient for the architects of western destruction to dilute indigenous populations to a point, where they no longer even hold numerical sovereignty in their own homelands. How vigorously the UN, that arch-antagonist of the West, is pursuing that goal.

The Enemy Within

Rise of Materialism and Fall of Spirituality

MOST INDIGENOUS WESTERNERS are now either agnostic or atheist, regardless of what they may tell you. That is a personal decision and need have no impact on others, but Christianity is not just about believing in a kindly old gent in the sky with a white beard or the lovely prospect of meeting your dear old mum and dad again one day. It's a code for living communal life on earth – and a very workable one. It is based upon love, forgiveness and respect for all humanity. Humanity being what it is, of course, its practical application has often been flawed and it might not have seemed so benign in 16th Century Spain when the Inquisition came to town, but that is distant history. It is the here and now that counts.

Old Values Die Young

ALAS, MODERN DISBELIEF in the Deity has come hand in hand with a new code of values, which hinges upon materialism. An old saying comes to mind: When a man stops believing in God, he doesn't believe in Nothing. He believes in Anything. Hallowed media figures, mindless sporting stars acclaimed as super-heroes, physical excess, mind-altering drugs, indiscriminate violence and general disregard for our neighbours.

At the same time, we witness a bizarre morality where human life can be terminated legally at five minutes to midnight, but at five minutes after midnight the clinician will go to jail. Furthermore, we have the mass undermining of the nuclear family and rejection of sexual equilibrium – a modern western world increasingly in denial of the most fundamental process of reproduction and where young children are being taught at school that they really don't have to be either a boy or a girl.

How weakened we have become morally and how this opens up our existential vulnerability to an alien replacement of our western culture. No, there is no going back to wholesale belief in heaven, but our leisurely acceptance of hell here on earth is indicative of our acceptance of the end of our kind. This particular reality is one that cannot be blamed upon external factors.

Wanton Progressive Liberalism

MUCH OF OUR WESTERN MALAISE is rooted firmly in progressive liberalism (not to be confused with the very different classical liberalism). This is a philosophy that advocates the steady dismantling of authority, of restrictions and of encumbrances to all and sundry. Do not prevent or curtail human behaviour, just let people do as they please. Set them free. Let it rip. Tolerate anything and everything. Initially, this philosophy sounds very positive, as history admittedly has been characterised by excessive and restrictive social domination by tyrannical elites.

My point is best illustrated by a local family I know, who are very tolerant in their supercilious, progressive liberal way. They have a son, a daughter and a dog. The son is allowed to play football in the garden raucously with his mates until nightfall. He goes out until whatever time he pleases and returns in the small hours of the morning. He drives his car along residential roads at 50mph with his illegal exhaust pipe howling. Police do nothing, of course.

Their daughter plays music loudly from her open bedroom window at all times of day and night and parties with drunken friends in the garden. Police do nothing, of course.

Their dog barks ceaselessly, wanders around their neighbourhood defecating merrily on the grass verges. In fact, the family are a model of modern, tolerant, progressive liberalism and have proudly turned their backs on the evils of authoritarianism. How their inclusive neighbourhood celebrates their welcome presence!

Last Train to Anarchy

THE PARADOX IS that Tolerance is like taking a train journey; you keep stopping at numerous stations to indulge your tolerance further and eventually you reach your end destination. Looking out of the window of your carriage you see the place name on the platform. It's called Anarchy Junction, an evil place. Yet, what an irony it is that western progressive liberals are the least tolerant when it comes to that most vital human right, freedom of speech.

Subversive Academia

WESTERN ACADEMIA and the science that emanates from it has achieved the unimaginable. We have put men on the moon, space probes on their way to other solar systems and can transplant hearts and limbs. The illusions of paradise are within our grasp.

However, it is within the circles of academia that we face one of our greatest existential threats. During the first half of the 20th Century it was well understood by a particular political regime that the way to subjugate a people is to get at the young. Indoctrinate them before they start really thinking for themselves and before their parents can bring their own influence to bear. And it works.

A high proportion of western academics right through the education system from primary schools right up to universities has become systemically left-wing and wholly antagonistic toward traditional western culture and values.

Statistical evidence for this is abundant and empirical evidence absolutely overwhelming. Any practitioner with traditional patriotic views, defending the independence of sovereign democratic states, the rights of freedom of speech, freedom of association and ultimately freedom of thought, will be hounded out of the workplace very rapidly. Nowhere are Big Brother's clutches felt more overtly than in the world of academia.

Hotbeds of Closet Reds

UNIVERSITIES ARE HOTBEDS of extreme left-wing activism and resist any attempts to open up broad philosophical debate. They literally ban any speakers from campus, who might project a counter view to Marxist, multi-cultural, globalist orthodoxy.

The echoes from the early part of the 20th Century in Central Europe are there for all to hear, but there are none so deaf as those who will not listen. Small wonder our universities turn out legions of clones fully conversant with orthodox group-think and all ready to take their positions of influence in the brave new world order.

Small wonder that when a prominent Cambridge professor of Asian extraction proclaimed that “White Lives Don’t Matter” her college rallied to her support. Blatant racism is merrily tolerated if it is in keeping with the destruction of western culture. Meanwhile, any academic who even referred to black markets, black magic, black moods, black comedy or blackmail might be castigated as a monstrous upholder of racism. What a biological irony when one considers that there is literally not one single human being on the planet, who is either white or black!

Toxic Mainstream Media

EXACERBATING THE CURRENT HYSTERIA we see toxic western broadcasters, some funded through hard-earned taxes paid by the people, which have been thoroughly infiltrated over decades by left-wing subversives. This infiltration has spread right through the ranks of both journalism and senior management.

At the same time, the vast array of print media controlled by the Globalist Capitalists pursue their own agenda of western destruction through whichever opportunities might occur at any time. Small wonder that journalists in general dare not attempt even-handed reporting for fear of their careers and even their jobs.

Far from being objective and impartial, the mainstream media populate their broadcasts, pages and websites with a ceaseless tirade of propaganda. A prominent example of this in Britain was the exhaustive effort of the media to petrify the public into voting away British independence in exchange for ever more EU subjugation. Fortunately, that was a rat we managed to smell.

Even more sinister, we find the independent, alternative media platforms being routinely censored, emasculated and sabotaged by the globalist high-tech corporations and their rogue western government puppets. Give the wrong opinions on-line and you may very soon be barred from any further participation.

Surveillance and Identity Capture

IN A WESTERN WORLD of ever-increasing crime levels and alien terror, it is no surprise that modern technology is fully harnessed in attempting to stem the tide. The British are among the most watched people in the western world and it is virtually impossible to travel around any city centre without your every step being monitored. If you are doing no wrong, then why worry perhaps? Just enjoy the additional reassurance of knowing that criminals and potential wrong-doers are also in the frame. This is indeed the main reason why face covering in public is unacceptable and should be banned (times of plague, alas, being the exception).

The surveillance doesn't stop there, of course. If you were to drive from Brighton to Bristol, government CCTV and mobile monitoring systems have the potential to identify exactly where you have been and when. This may all seem benign – and to a large extent it may still be, but what is going to happen as the anti-western predators and their political puppets pursue their goals. What will happen when it is not overt crime that will catch you in the technological net, but the mere disapproval of the controlling Junta? There are already places around the world, where this is the daily reality and only the naïve or the gormless would doubt that it is coming here.

George Orwell could foresee all this back in 1948, so why are we so oblivious to it now that it is staring us right in the face?

Will this affect the Pound in your Pocket?

ALONGSIDE FACIAL AND VEHICLE monitoring sits another technological tool, which has an equally sinister prospect. For individuals to live a normal, material life, they must have access to economic resources and this is where currency comes in. However, the traditional medium of cash is fast disappearing and the Covid-19 period – with all of its associated hysteria - has inevitably accelerated this trend, as electronic payment by definition does reduce contagion risk.

However, once cash has been virtually abandoned, every personal transaction will generate recordable data that can be processed and analysed by those possessing the technology. Do you realise even now that every card transaction you ever made is still on record? In short, one will be unable to go anywhere, other than for a walk in the country, without the Establishment knowing. How easy it will be to isolate and control dissidents by tagging their electronic payment profiles. Government could prevent you from buying virtually anything, such as computer access, travel tickets, hotel accommodation, motor transport - leaving just bare essentials available, such as food and clothing. Economic house arrest.

Who told Big Brother? You did.

YET THE WHOLESALÉ CAPTURE of personal data and lifestyle monitoring has been readily accepted by western consumers. Every time we transact on-line we leave a clear footprint of who we are and what sort of people we are. Retailers retain vast amounts of consumption data on individuals through credit card purchases. Social networking platforms gather data about whom we interact with, what our political views are, where we have been geographically and where we are planning to be tomorrow. Yet all of this data is handed over by our modern consumers without any appreciation of the implications for future manipulation. The smoke screen put up by the ill-founded, EU-imposed GDPR (General Data Protection Regulations) to convince us that all our personal data now rests in trustworthy hands, was a complete illusion.

Already, we see the ability of relatively benign western governments and the much more sinister globalist hi-tech corporations to paralyse the lives of harmless, law-abiding individuals by freezing their access to banking and communication networks - without any explanations given.

These victims have been left unable to pay their rent, mortgages and other outgoings - unable even to access their own salary payments from their employers. The banks involved are not even allowed to explain to the victim what has happened - just a bland silence and refusal to answer questions.

Mere government or corporate disapproval of a person's social or political views is already invoking destructive personal sanctions and this will get steadily worse in the coming years.

As for the potential for corrupting democratic elections, as we inch ever closer to electronic voting, the implications are obvious. Widespread postal voting has already made a mockery of elector confidentiality and facilitated extensive fraud on both sides of the Atlantic. In the future, it will not be the party that attracts the widest popular support that wins, but the party that wields the cleverest, covert electronics - courtesy of their own hi-tech backers, no doubt.

Whilst modern surveillance, electronic payment and social networking systems bring us convenience and connectivity, let nobody doubt that the time will come when they will be used to implement wholesale, dictatorial control of our whole lives and the suppression of personal freedom.

Scaremongering? Been to Shanghai recently?

Summary

Terra Nostra, Quo Vadis?

IN THIS DELIBERATELY SHORT appraisal of the dire threats facing our Western World, we have looked at the primary components, which are individually and collectively contributing to the demise of our sovereign democracies. If one wanted to delve further, one could add many other strands and expand this work to a 1,000-page epic with piles of statistics to boot. But that is not the purpose here, because most people just wouldn't read it.

So, Globalist Capitalism, Globalist Marxism, Imperialist Red China and Globalist Islam line up alongside the United Nations, each hungering for world domination. However, despite the temptation to indulge in grand conspiracy theory, one can hardly claim that they are a concerted movement in the proper sense. Their motives are overtly contradictory, as their end objectives vary so greatly.

The comparison with the Allies of World War Two comes to mind. Between August 1939 and June 1941 Nazi Germany and Soviet Russia were actually in alliance – until that alliance no longer suited one and the knives came out. Likewise, the Americans and the British Empire were in alliance with Soviet Russia between 1941 and 1945 until the common objective was achieved. The Cold War came next and came close to annihilating all life on this planet.

No happy ending this way

IN SIMILAR FASHION the predatory forces that now stalk the West will ultimately set about resolving their own rivalries. There will be no Utopia after the death of the West, just ongoing, eternal conflict and subjugation. As for the Globalist Capitalists, maybe they feel in the short term their capital is so portable that they will be able to simply dodge the threats that Globalist Marxism will generate, but in the long run even they will have nowhere to run. The world is just too small and growing ever smaller.

The most despicable aspects of western decline, however, are the destructive forces from within. Betrayal by progressive liberals, key among these being subversive academics. Such people show every sign of loathing all aspects of their own culture and a bizarre belief that all cultures outside of the West hold some sort of moral ascendancy over ours.

This, despite the chaotic and barbaric reality within so many regimes around the Third World, which are so often characterised by internal strife, civil war, genocide, terrorism, totalitarianism, criminal violence, corruption, misogyny, homophobia, paedophilia and every conceivable abuse of human and animal rights. Is this really the model that progressive liberals seek? Surely, these people are either stunningly stupid or intensely wicked.

Matthew 10.36: “A man’s enemies will be the members of his own household.” Surely, there is no other way for us to view our western progressive liberals.

Balls. Crystal.

AS THE ASSAULT ON THE WEST develops further, we shall face the prospect of intense internal strife within Europe and the Anglosphere. Inevitably, these western populations will sooner or later attempt to stand their ground, although judging by the ineptitude, incredulity and timidity of the vast majority of our citizens, this may well be too late to stem the tide.

During this extended period of strife, we shall see civil wars and severe territorial fragmentation. Countries like the UK are likely to degenerate into a chessboard of ghetto-like, intercultural, inter-religious zones, on a scale similar to that of 1990’s Yugoslavia. Segregation, such as happened in India from 1947, will be a distinct possibility. No more green and pleasant land here.

In the second half of this century we are likely to see a world that looks something like this: Imperialist Red China will hold a position akin to that, which Rome enjoyed during the early centuries of the first millennium. But China will remain a sinister, unassailable totalitarian entity, whose direct physical influence will dominate the entire Far East and Australasia.

Africa will remain sorrowfully backward and impoverished and it will be thoroughly exploited and manipulated under Chinese domination. In other words, simply an extrapolation of what we have been seeing these last decades. It will be entirely Muslim.

Europe will be dominated economically by Red China, yet its populations will be majority Afro-Asian and predominantly Muslim with ever-shrinking and persecuted indigenous minorities.

In North America the USA will be majority Afro-Hispanic with a predominant mixture of Catholic and Muslim faiths. Its relative global position will have fallen steadily until it exerts only secondary influence and secession will split the country into smaller entities. White Americans will be marginalised to the rural spaces, ironically in a similar way to the native North Americans during the 19th Century. Canada will be a predominantly Asian and Islamic country with a similar marginalised white minority to the USA.

South and Central America will mirror Africa in terms of providing a basin of resources for Red China and its imperial satellites. It will remain Catholic, rather than become Muslim.

India will surge in relative economic importance, but is, in any case, heading for massive internal inter-religious strife, which will lead to full civil war and further partitioning of the 1947 type.

Isolated, though relatively inconsequential, outposts of sovereign democracy might survive a little longer. Japan?

Russia, as always, presents a more enigmatic subject for forecast.

Nobs still on Nob Hill

THERE'S NOTHING SO ENDURING as a Nob. This small upper circle of Globalist Capitalists will survive and thrive, as they will represent a valuable and thus tolerable human asset in managing the regions of the Chinese global empire. Most historic royal families, being essentially members of Global Capitalism anyway will continue to live in stable, assured luxury and continue to perform a variety of meaningless civic pantomimes to impress local, sycophantic, brain-washed proletariats. No change there then.

Unsurprisingly, the potentates will live in sumptuous luxury on fortified estates or islands and their communal cyber-network of communication will mesh closely with the equivalent infrastructure of Imperialist Red China.

Winners, Losers and Last Chances

RED CHINA WILL HAVE predominance over the economic world, together with the inevitable military leverage, which its material resources will provide. Islam will have predominance over the spiritual world. Globalist Capitalists will effectively be the new regional monarchies - albeit under Chinese licence. Having played its wilful part in the destruction of the West, Globalist Marxism will implode, having sold all of us - and indeed itself - a pup yet again, because there never was going to be a comradely, egalitarian Utopia. Red China will ensure that.

Ostensibly, the losers will be that meritorious branch of humanity that pulled our world out of the Dark and Middle Ages, through the Renaissance and into the age of science and enlightenment. They gave the world its finest art, architecture, literature, music, drama and latterly a tried and tested blueprint for political stability. They were at the forefront of helping and mentoring all of humanity towards a better, safer world. But they developed that fatal flaw, for which there is no compensation: they became weak and evolution will not tolerate weakness.

Decadence, complacency, apathy, mindless materialism and internally-generated self-loathing had eroded that earlier moral fibre, which had once brought them such pre-eminence. So, the losers will be the pan-Europeans and their global diaspora.

But even greater losers will be mankind at large, because it was the western democracies that were the driving force that could have led this world towards a wholly better future. Indeed, they were imperfect, but their direction of travel was gradually towards a more enlightened world, a fairer world, a more sustainable world. It was going to take time, but patience ran out.

Alternative Futures?

BUT DOES THIS HAVE TO BE? Are there still alternatives?

Now at the beginning of the third decade of this millennium, yes, there may still be time to stop this journey to the abyss. But it's running out very fast - we have less than a decade left.

As individuals, of course, we can do very little and that is why each and every one of us needs to join and support a patriotic political party tomorrow. Yes, that means you. Particularly you with children and grandchildren, for they will be the ones who suffer the consequences of your negligence. But will you do it? What did you do Grandpa when Britain was being destroyed? I kept my head down, dear, and watched Coronation Street? Sound like you?

Amid a widespread return to patriotism, the great western democracies must take a renewed pride in their huge achievements and historic status. If the people are willing to support genuinely patriotic political parties, as opposed to the current agents of western destruction, we can have brave and intelligent government, which puts the interests of the people first and confronts our Five Horsemen of the Apocalypse. A precursor to such a vision is, of course, a proper proportional electoral system, where legislative chambers contain true representation of the interests of the people at large, rather than unpalatable representatives elected merely because they are blocking out an even less palatable alternative.

Government must bring globalist corporations to heel. We must not let them blackmail sovereign populations into a state of subservience, terrified that they will take their capital elsewhere. They won't. They will not forsake the dwindling number of countries where it is still safe to do business in an open and fair way, because western countries are simply too lucrative for them. But we must stand up to them or become ever more their vassals.

OK, if some of them were to fly the nest, we simply would have to accept it. Having a little less material wealth in our pockets will do us little harm, but what price freedom and self-determination?

Political donations to parties from commerce and trade unions must be severely restricted, such that ordinary people have a vastly increased influence over political direction.

Government must purge our land of Globalist Marxism, alongside the equally subversive progressive liberalism, especially in the media and academia. Whilst freedom of thought, expression and association must remain central to our values, toxic anti-British philosophies have been allowed to dominate to the point, where we witness mass brain-washing of our population - particularly younger generations - against the very concept of Britishness.

Government must resist invasive Imperialist Red China, using that most powerful of weapons, Trade. We should not sponsor the abusive regime in Red China by allowing their goods into our markets with the present ridiculously low tariffs. Trade should be on a balanced footing, whereby Chinese imports are traded directly against western exports.

If China wants to restrict western goods coming into their markets, then let them stack their own exports all along Shanghai waterfront. It's surprising how quickly predators back off when their prey turns and defends itself.

What are our Chances?

EMPIRICAL EXPERIENCE OF OUR western citizenry, however, hardly augurs well: fatuous lack of interest in anything further than their garden gate, materialism, parsimony and sad timidity, bordering on cowardice. In this context we may reflect upon an 18th Century quote from Edmund Burke: “The only thing necessary for the triumph of evil is that good men do nothing.”

And my word, are good men good at doing nothing.

And last words from Churchill ...

“If you will not fight for right when you can easily win without bloodshed; if you will not fight when your victory will be sure and not too costly; you may come to the moment when you will have to fight with all odds against you and only a precarious chance of survival. There may be even a worse fate, you may have to fight when there is no hope.”

Recommended additional reading:

The Strange Death of Europe - Douglas Murray

The Gathering Storm - Winston Churchill

Their Finest Hour - Winston Churchill

The Death of the Gods - Carl Miller

Nineteen Eighty-Four - George Orwell

Animal Farm - George Orwell

A Gift for Treason - Daniel Jupp

The Bible

The Five Horsemen of the Western Apocalypse

Destruction of the West and
the New Dark Age to come

A brief personal view by Mike Glennon

Spring 2021

mgpublications@publicist.com